but not before he had received a wound from a knife, inflicted by Rory. He m. DORCAS, dau. of WILLIAM SYDNEY,* Esq. of Orford, in Kent, and had fifteen children. This lady, who had been one of the maids of honour to Queen ELIZABETH, obtained, through her influential connexions at Court, grants in Ireland (in Leix) so extensive, that, at one period, the family were the territorial lords of more than a moiety of the Queen's County. The feud with the O'Moores enduring, however, in all its lawless violence, came at length to issue, in 1596, and proved fatal to Cosbie and his eldest son. In that year ANTHONY O'MOORE, the chief of the insurgent clans bearing his name, sent to demand a passage over Stradbally Bridge, but the requisition being deemed by Cosby a challenge, was promptly and peremptorily denied, and preparations were commenced, without loss of time, to defend the pass, should the enemy attempt to force it. That attempt being made by O'MOORE, on the 19th of May, the Lord of Stradbally, at the head of his Kern, accompanied by his son and heir, FRANCIS, who had married about a year previously, Hellen, dau. of Thomas Harpole, Esq. of Shrule, and had born to him a son, William, but nine weeks before, met his foe in deadly combat on the bridge, while the conflict was witnessed from a window in the abbey by Dorcas Sydney and her daughter-in-law. For some time the valour of the Cosbies was irresistible, and the fortune of the day appeared to be theirs. Alexander, however, pursuing his advantage with extraordinary impetuosity, received a wound which proved at once mortal, and instantly turned the tide of battle. The Kern, with melancholy howling for the fate of their leader, began to give way, when Francis Cosby, fearing that he should be entirely abandoned, leaped over the bridge in the hope of making good his retreat to the abbey; but the instant that he had cleared the battlements, he was mortally wounded, and fell dead into the river. These scenes, one should have imagined, would have appalled the now widowed ladies who had witnessed them; yet it is recorded that Hellen Harpole, with the coolest presence of mind, cautioned her mother-in-law to retain in her recollection how the elder Cosbie fell before his son, her husband, who had, by thus inheriting the estates even for a few minutes, entitled her to her thirds, or dowry. It is not known how the ladies eventually escaped; but the infant, WILLIAM COSBY, was carried off and preserved by his nurse. O'Moore, pursuing his victory, took possession of the abbey, and after sacking, committed it to the flames, when many of the patents, and other valuable documents of the family, were destroyed in the conflagration. The issue of Alexander Cosby and Dorcas Sydney were,

FRANCIS, b. 1 Jan. 1571, and baptized with much ceremony in St. Patrick's Church, Dublin, the lord deputy standing godfather. He was captain of the Kern, and fell, as already stated, immediately AFTER his father, at the battle of Stradbally Bridge, on 19 May, 1590, leaving by his wife, Hellen Harpole (who wedded 2ndly, Sir Thomas Loftus, of Killian, in the King's County), an infant child, WILLIAM, b. in 1596, who s. him.

RICHARD, successor to his nephew.

Charles, b. 12 Sept. 1585, m. a dau. of the Loftus family.

Arnold, b. 20 June, 1591, settled in the co. Cavan, and planted a branch of the family there.

Mable, b. 12 Aug. 1598, m. to George Harpole, Esq. of Shrule, in the Queen's County, and d. in 1632, leaving issue.

Rose, b. in the Queen's house, at Otford, in Kent, 20 Nov. 1582, said to have wedded a Lord Howth.

The melancholy catastrophe of Alexander Cosby and his son appears to have created a strong public feeling at the time, and the Queen, taking the state of the family into her gracious consideration, was pleased to grant, by letters-patent, in which the circumstances of the battle of the bridge are recited, to DORCAS SYDNEY and HELLEN HARPOLE, the wardship of the infant, WILLIAM COSBY, besides conferring upon them pensions, in consideration of the many essential services rendered by their husbands to the crown. Alexander Cosby was s. although for a few minutes only, by his eldest son,

FRANCIS COSBY, Esq. of Stradbally Abbey, who being slain, as stated above, never enjoyed the inheritance, but left it to his infant child,

WILLIAM COSBY, Esq. of Stradbally Abbey, who died young, when the estates reverted to his uncle,

* Grand-nephew of William Sydney, Lord of Cranleigh.

RICHARD COSBY, Esq. who thus became "of Stradbally Abbey," and, in order to repair the loss occasioned by the destruction of the family records, at the time of the burning of the abbey, obtained under the commission of King JAMES I. for the remedy of defective titles, a new patent of the same import as the old one, which is still extant. This Richard, who was Captain of the Kern, and esteemed of great martial courage and ability, eagerly solicitous, on becoming chief of his line, to avenge the death of his father and brother, dared the O'Moores to a pitched battle, and the challenge being accepted, the contending clans met once more (A.D. 1686), in the glyn of Augnahily, under the rock of Dunnamace, when a most bloody conflict ensued, terminating in the triumph of Cosby, and the total defeat of his foes, who were never afterwards able to make head against him. Captain Cosby himself displayed great personal boldness, and received so many dangerous wounds in the action, that he could not be removed from the field to Stradbally, but was carried to Dysert House, then the seat of Sir Robert Pigot, where he remained a considerable time before he was so far recovered as to be enabled to return home. During his confinement, Elizabeth Pigot, one of the daughters of his hospitable host, attended him with so much kindness and care, that he subsequently solicited her hand, and she became his wife soon after his re-establishment at Stradbally. This union, although in every other point unexceptionable, proved in a high degree prejudicial to the fortunes of the family, for his mother, Dorcas Sydney, who entertained a deep-rooted antipathy to the Pigots, taking offence at the alliance, immediately went over to England, where she married a second husband, Sir Thomas Zouch, and left all her estates in Ireland, excepting Timahoe, to the Zouches, while she leased that for a long term to Sir Thomas Loftus, who had become, in 1615, the second husband of her daughter-in-law, Hellen, the widow of Francis Cosby. Richard Cosby had, by Elizabeth Pigot, who d. in 1669, with a dau., Dorcas, m. to William Loftus, Esq. of Ballymann, four sons, of whom the eldest, ALEXANDER, was his heir; and the second, Francis, M.P., b. in 1612, m. Anne, dau. of Sir Thomas Loftus, of Killyan, and had issue, 1. Mr. Coulthart s. to the family estates on the death of his father in 1807.

Lineage.

The Coulthards are of great antiquity in the south of Scotland; for in the early chronicles we find John de Coulthart actively engaged as a cadet under Walwein, in resisting the encroachments of the King of Northumbria, when that powerful prince subdued the Strath-cluyd Britons, and added the kingdom of Galloway to his other possessions. As further evidence of the great antiquity of the Coulthards, it may be mentioned that there is carefully preserved by the present representative of the family, the copy of a marriage settlement, purporting to be made in the twenty-first year of the reign of King KENNETHUS III., between one Alice Cumin, of Whitern, of one part, and Walter Cumin, Earl of Monteith, and Robert Douglas, of that ilk, of another part, whereby certain estates situated at Whitern were conveyed in trust to the said Walter Cumin and Robert Douglas by the said Alice Cumin, in contemplation of her marriage with William de Coulthart and Largmore. Also in the records of the parish of Carsphern, mention is made of Robert Coulthart, laird of Largmore, giving ten marks to the poor of that parish, A.D. 1534, but from that period till 1612, neither the historical narratives of the times, the registers of the surrounding parishes, nor the private papers of the family, afford any satisfactory information regarding the lineal descent.

Confining our details, therefore, to the evidence of documents clearly authentic, we deduce the genealogy from

WILLIAM COULTHART, of Largmore, co. Kirkcudbright, yeoman, who was a party to deeds in 1612, and in 1624, m. Mary, dau. of Richard Mackenzie, Esq. of Craig Hall, in the said county, and had issue,

Mr. Wood Cra'ster assumed, by royal sign-manual, the surname of CRA'STER,* on inheriting, under the will of George Cra'ster of Cra'ster, the estates of that family. He is a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant of the county of Northumberland.

Lineage.

This was the principal family, and is the only one remaining which held by military tenure under the Barony of Visconti. The manor of Crawcestre, or Craucestre, now written Craster, formed part of the barony of Emildon, which was granted to the House of Visconti by King HENRY I., to be holden by three knights' fees; but since the forfeiture, after the battle of Evesham, of Simon de Montford, Earl of Leicester, who had obtained the barony from Ranetta, dau. and heir of John le Visconti, the manor of Craucestre has ever been separated, and held of the crown in capite.

In a return of the knights' fees in the co. of Northumberland, supposed to be made in the sixth year of King JOHN, WILLIAM DE CRAUCESTRE is there returned as lord of the manor of Craucestre, which he then held by half a knight's fee of ancient feoffment, by which it appears that this family had been possessed of that manor in the time of King HENRY I.

In a certificate of the knights' fees of Northumberland, in the 3rd of HENRY III., by Hugh Bolebeck, then sheriff, it is returned, under the barony of Emildon, that John le Visconti held of the King in cap. iii. fees, whereof William de Rock held the iiij part of one fee; WILLIAM DE CRAUCESTRE held one fee, Reginald de Dunstan the iiij part of a fee, and Thomas de Warnham, half a fee. In the inquisition post mortem of John le Visconti, 29th King HENRY III., JOHN DE CRAUCESTRE is found to be possessed of the third part of the manor of Dunston. This John adhering to Simon de Montford, Earl of Leicester, was in all the wars and disturbances of that tumultuous reign, and was killed with his general at the battle of Evesham, and all his lands seized by the king. It is presumed they were restored to RICHARD, his son, who was knighted by EDWARD I. in the Scotch wars; for in the twenty-fifth year of that king, in an inquisition taken then by Sir John de Lythens, escheator of this county, SIR RICHARD DE CRAUCESTRE is found to be lord of the manor of Craucestre, which he held of Edmund, Duke of Lancaster.

SIR EDMUND DE CRAUCESTRE was both in the wars of France and Scotland, and was knighted for his services therein by EDWARD III. He was lord of the manor of Craucestre, and held lands in Dunston, and Newton-by-the-Sea, as appears by a grant of that manor from Sir Thomas St. Mawr to Sir John Strevelin, anno 26 EDW. III.

RICHARD DE CRAUCESTRE lived in the time of King HENRY IV., and died in the 4th of HENRY V.; having married Emma, the only daughter and heiress of Walter de Tyndale, Baron of Devilston, or Dilston, the last of that family, he became in her right lord of that barony, but he, Richard, surviving all his children by that marriage, was s. by his brother Henry, in the manor of Craucestre.

EDMUND DE CRAUCESTRE adhered to the House of York during the wars of the Roses, and received from EDWARD IV. a grant to himself and to Richard, his eldest son, of the manor of North Charlton, with several lands in Shipley and Ditchburn, forfeited by the attainder of John Beaumont. He had issue two sons, RICHARD, who succeeded him; and William, who was likewise in the wars of the period. To the elder son,

RICHARD DE CRAUCESTRE, a warm promoter of the interest of the House of York, King EDWARD IV., in the first year of his reign, granted the custody of Bamborough Castle, and in the fifth year, the manor of North Charlton, in tail; and in his tenth year, the office of bow-bearer of the forest of Danby. He was s. by his son,

EDMUND DE CRAUCESTRE, who first wrote the name CRA'STER. He was lord of the manor of Craucestre, and constable of Dunstonburgh Castle for life, by grant from King HENRY VII., in the fourth year of his reign. Craufurd, John, Esq. of Auchinames and Crosbie, co. Ayr, b. 4 Jan. 1780; m. 16 Aug. 1814, Sophia-Marianna, dau. of Major-General Horace Churchill, and great-granddau. of Sir Robert Walpole, and has issue,

Edward-Henry-John, b. in 1816.

Mr. Craufurd inherited the estates at the decease of his cousin, John Craufurd, Esq. of Auchinames, in May, 1814, being served heir to his great-grandfather, John Craufurd, of Drumsoy and Auchinames. He is a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant in Ayrshire.

Lineage.

This branch of the great house of Craufurd derives from

DUNCAN CRAUFURD, of Camlarg, third son of David Craufurd, of Kerse, who appears to have had (living in the reign of JAMES IV.) an only dau.,

MARGARET CRAUFURD, who wedded John Craufurd, of Drongan, and had three sons, of whom the youngest,

WILLIAM CRAUFURD, is designed, in a writ under the great seal, anno 1567, "of Drumsoy." He was father of

WILLIAM CRAUFURD, of Drumsoy, living in 1577, who m. Margaret Fairlie, and had two sons, Robert and William, by the elder of whom,

SIR ROBERT CRAUFURD-FAIRLIE, he was s. some time before the 13 Aug. 1596. Sir Robert had m. in his father's life, Agnes, only dau. of David Fairlie, of that ilk, in the parish of Largs, and assumed in consequence the additional surname of Fairlie. He had by that lady several daus., of whom was AGNES, heiress of Drumsoy; and Janet, m. William Cathcart, of Carbieston. Sir Robert appears to have been s. in Fairlie, by a Robert Craufurd, alias Fairlie, conjectured to be his son; but Drumsoy passed to his elder dau.,

AGNES CRAUFURD, who m. her first cousin, Robert Craufurd, son of her uncle William, and was s. by (it is presumed) her son,

DUNCAN CRAUFURD, of Dromsoy, who m. in 1621, Jane, dau. of Sir Robert Fairlie, of that ilk, (by Marion, dau. of Thomas Craufurd, of Jordanhill) and was s. by his son,

DAVID CRAUFURD, of Drumsoy, who m. a dau. of Gordon, of Craiglaw, (maternally descended from David Craufurd, of Kerse,) and had three sons, DAVID, his successor; Esplin, a captain in the army; and Patrick, who inherited Drumsoy, from his grand-niece. David Craufurd d. before the year 1675, and was s. by his eldest son,

DAVID CRAUFURD, of Drumsoy. This laird m. a dau. of James Craufurd, of Baidland, afterwards Ardmillan, and was s. by his son,

EMILIA CRAUFURD, of Drumsoy, who d. unm. in 1731, when the representation of the family reverted to her grand-uncle,

PATRICK CRAUFURD, of Drumsoy, who had previously acquired the estate by purchase. Before purchasing Drumsoy, Patrick Craufurd had become proprietor of the estate of Auchinames, in the same manner, and became closely allied to that branch of the family of Craufurd by marrying Jane, second dau. of Archibald Craufurd, sixteenth baron of Auchinames. She was, however, his second wife. He m. 1st, a dau. of Gordon, of Turnberry, and had one son and two daus., namely,

THOMAS, who d. at Paris, in 1724, being at the time envoy-extraordinary from the court of St. James's to that of Versailles.

CRAWFURD OF CRAWFURD.

CRAWFURD, ROBERT, Esq. of Newfield, in the shire of Ayr, chief of the Crawfurd family, s. his father in 1843. Mr. Crawfurd is an officer in the Rifle brigade.

Lineage.

The extreme ancestor of the family of CRAWFURD in Scotland was Reginald, apparently fourth and youngest son of Alan, fourth Earl of Richmond, who d. in 1146. He seems to have accompanied DAVID I. to the North, when that Prince entered his kingdom from the court of his brother-in-law HENRY I. of England, "followed," says Chalmers, "by a thousand Norman knights, whom he provided for and established in his dominions for their civilization and protection." Reginald received extensive grants of lands in Strath Cluyd, or Clydesdale, whence his immediate descendants adopted the name—Crawfurd—it forming one of the largest baronies in Scotland whilst entire, some three or four hundred merk lands, and signifying, according to Chalmers, in Gaelic, "the Pass of Blood," as commemorative probably of some sanguinary conflict between the aborigines and their Roman invaders.

JOHN CRAWFURD, son of the first settler, witnesses deeds in the chartulary of that monastery along with Baldwin de Biggar, ancestor to the Earls of Wigton, and he is therein styled step-son to Baldwin. Where this John established his residence was termed, says Chalmers, "Villum Johannis Privigni Baldwini;" and the circumjacent village that arose, John's Town; this portion of the barony constituting the parish of Crawfurd-John, in contradistinction to Crawfurd proper, inherited by his elder brother. "From the elder branch," (observes George Crawfurd, the genealogist, quoting the learned professor Thomas Crawfurd's MSS.) "came heirs female—but another part of the barony remained with the heirs male (descended from Reginald), from whom derived the Crawfurds of Loudoun, and from John, his (Reginald's) son, came the designation of Crawfurd-John."

DOMINUS GALFREDUS DE CRAWFURD, the elder branch, ranking with the Magnates Scotiæ, is a frequent witness to his sovereign, King WILLIAM the Lion's charters; so much so, observes Crawfurd, "he seems to have had some general relation to the king's service or another;" but for which he was unable to account. The recorded kindred, in John Le Scott's charter, (nephew to the king,) in the chartulary of the monastery of Arbroth, and John Le Scott's near connexion with the then and last Earl of Richmond of that line, Reginald's elder brother, render his aggrandizement not of such difficult solution. He had a son,

GALFREDUS, who d. in 1202, and left an only son,

JOHN DE CRAWFURD, Miles, who dying in 1248, was buried in Melrose Abbey, and his estates divided between his two daus. and co-heiresses; the elder married Archibald de Douglas, and was progenitrix of the renowned Earls of Douglas; of this lady (by whom, as Chalmers shews, the Douglas's obtained their first considerable addition of property) there is a very perfect and beautiful effigy in Douglas Church, Lanarkshire, opposite that of Douglas, Duke of Turin. The second dau. m. David de Lindsay, from whom descended the Earls of Crawfurd, distinguished in Scottish history. Between those two ladies the territory of Crawfurd proper went, styled afterwards Crawfurd-Douglas and Crawfurd-Lindsay.

We now revert to JOHN "Privignus Baldwini," the second son of Reginald, the first settler, and younger brother or uncle to Dominus Galfredus above—designated of Crawfurd-John. From him descended his son or grandson,

SIR REGINALD DE CRAWFURD, a personage of great eminence, who m. circa 1200, the heiress of the extensive barony of Loudoun, in Ayrshire, (which afterwards gave the title of Earl to its possessors) and he became the first Vicecomes of the county. He d. in 1226, when he was s. by his son,

HUGH DE CRAWFURD, of Loudoun, Vicecomes de Air, who left two sons, HUGH, the heir of the family; and Reginald, the first of that branch of the Crawfurds which was of Kerse. This last named

HUGH DE CRAWFURD s. his father in 1246, in Loudoun, and as Vicecomes de Air: by his wife, Alicia, he left a son Reginald, and a dau. Margaret, who m. Sir Malcolm Wallace, of Ellersley, and was mother of the immortal patriot, Sir William Wallace. Hugh d. in 1288, when he was s. by his son,

SIR REGINALD CRAWFURD, Vicecomes de Air, a distinguished patriot, who was treacherously murdered at a banquet at Ayr, in 1297; leaving two sons, I. Reginald, his successor in Loudoun, who left one only dau., Dame Susan Crawfurd, m. to Sir Duncan Campbell, of Redcastle: from this marriage lineally descends the present Marquess of Hastings and EARL OF LOUDOUN; and II. Hugh, who inherited Crosby, &c.

HUGH CRAWFURD, of Crosby, &c., second son, d. prior to the year 1320, and was s. by his son,

REGINALD CRAWFURD, of Crosby, who obtained in 1320, a grant of the lands of Auchinames, in Renfrewshire, for his services to Robert Bruce, as well as an augmentation to his arms of two lances in saltier, commemorative of his exploits at Bannockburn. To him succeeded his son,

REGINALD CRAWFURD, of Auchinames and Crosby, whose name appears prefixed as a witness to a charter by Robert, the High Steward, in 1358. His son and successor,

THOMAS CRAWFURD, of Auchinames, m. the dau. and heiress of Malcolm Galbraith, and was s. by his son,

ARCHIBALD CRAWFURD, of Auchinames, who m. Margaret, dau. and co-heiress of Sir William Douglas, of Peircetoun, and had (with a younger child, Thomas, ancestor of the Crawfurds of Thirdpart) a son and heir,

ROBERT CRAWFURD, of Auchinames, who wedded, 1st, a dau. of Archibald, Earl of Angus, and 2ndly, a dau. of Houstoun, of Houstoun. He was s. at his decease by his eldest son,

ROBERT CRAWFURD, of Auchinames, who accompanying his sovereign, JAMES IV. to the battle of Flodden, was there slain in 1513. His eldest son,

JAMES CRAWFURD, of Auchinames, obtained from his father, in 1498, a charter of Crosby and Monoch. To him s. his son,

THOMAS CRAWFURD, of Auchinames, living in 1535. This laird m. Marion, dau. of Montgomery, of Hazlehead, great-granddau. of Alexander, Master of Eglinton, son of Alexander, 1st Lord Montgomerie, and by whom he had three sons, successive lairds of Auchinames; by the eldest of whom,

JOHN CRAWFURD, of Auchinames, he was succeeded at his decease. This gentleman being slain at the battle of Pinkie, in 1547, s. p., the estates devolved on his next brother,

William Crawfurd, of Auchinames, who wedded Annabel, dau. of Chalmers, of Gadgirth, and had one son, James, whose only child, Jane, m. about the year 1606, Patrick Crawfurd, of Auchinames, and thus the ancient estates of the family were reunited. William Crawfurd d. in 1582, when the barony of Auchinames reverted to the male heir, his uncle,

Patrick Crawfurd, of Auchinames, who m. a dau. of John Frazer, third laird of Knock, and had a son and successor,

William Crawfurd, of Auchinames, who m. in 1587, a dau. of Sir Patrick Houstoun, of that ilk, and was s. by his son,

Patrick Crawfurd, of Auchinames, who m. in 1606, Jane Crawfurd, heiress of Crosby, and thus again united the ancient estates of Crosby and Auchinames. He had issue, William, his heir; James, whose issue is extinct; Robert, of Nethermains, who continued the family; Patrick; John; Hugh, minister of Cumnock, father of Hugh Crawfurd, of Gride; Margaret; Jane; Katherine; and Elizabeth, m. to Robert Hunter, of Hunterston. Auchinames was s. by his eldest son,

William Crawfurd, of Auchinames, who was infeft in 1649. He m. Anna, dau. of Sir Coll Lamont, of Inneryne, and had, with several daus., a son and heir,

Archibald Crawfurd, of Auchinames, Crosby, &c. the sixteenth baron or chief of this family descended from Loudoun in a direct male line. He m. a dau. of Porterfield, of that ilk, and had a son,

William, who m. Helen, dau. of Sir Thomas Burnet, of Crimond, and dying vitâ patris, left an only daughter, who wedded Patrick Edmonston, of Newton, and had several children.
Anna, m. to James Bruce, of Powfouls.
Jane, m. to Patrick Craufurd, of Drumsoy.
Margaret, m. to James Young, of Killicanty.

Archibald having left no male issue, the estates of Auchinames and Crosby were brought to judicial sale in 1715, during the minority of his granddaughter, and were purchased by Patrick Craufurd, merchant, Edinburgh, younger brother to David Craufurd, of Drumsoy, (of the Kerse family,) and eventually his heir. Hence Drumsoy is styled of Auchinames. Crosby, acquired as above, is still possessed by his descendant, John Craufurd. The above Patrick of Drumsoy m. Jane, second dau. to Archibald of Auchinames, but the representation of the family through female descent, went by his granddaughter to the Edmonstons—the male representation reverted to his uncle,

Robert Crawfurd, designed by Nisbet, "Captain Robert Craufurd, of Nethermains." He m. Christian, dau. and co-heiress of Robert Brown, of Nethermains and Burrowlands; which latter estate was conveyed by the younger sister to her husband, Alexander Blair, of Giffordland. He d. in 1678, leaving three sons, Robert, Patrick, and Moses, successive heirs. Captain Crawfurd was s. by his elder son,

Robert Crawfurd, M.D., of Nethermains, who m. 1st, a dau. of the Rev. George Crawfurd, minister of Kilbride, and 2ndly, Agnes Dickie, but dying s. p., was s. by his brother,

Patrick Crawfurd, Esq. of Nethermains, who had an only dau., Agnes, who wedded in 1709, John Boyd, Esq., of Craneberry Moss, and appears to have alienated Nethermains to a family of the name of Glasgow. Her retour, dated 1723, calls her nearest heir to her grandfather, Captain Robert Crawfurd, who was "tertius legitimus filius Patricii Crawfurd, de Auchenames." On the demise of Patrick Crawford, of Nethermains, without male issue, the representation devolved on his brother,

Moses Crawfurd, Esq., who m. 1st, Marion Francis, of the ancient family of Francis of Stane, and had a son, Archibald (named after his cousin-german, the last of Auchinames, then resident at Crosby), who d. in infancy, and a dau., Christian. He wedded 2ndly, Janet Allason, granddau. of Allason, of Curreath, and had by her (who d. in 1738), 1. Robert, his heir; 2. Archibald, whose son, Moses, emigrated to America, and had a son, Moses, a lieut. R.N., lately deceased; 3. David; 4. Jane; 5. Elizabeth. Mr. Crawfurd d. in 1723, and was s. by his eldest son,

Robert Crawfurd, Esq., b. in 1707, who m. Marion Brison, co-heiress of the lands of Groateholme, in the parish of Kilvinning, and dying in 1772, was s. by his eldest surviving son,

Moses Crawfurd, Esq., who went to India about the year 1765, and there attained the rank of major in the company's service. He was second in command at the capture of Beechigar, a strong hill-fort on the Ganges, and was left in command of that place with a garrison of two thousand men. Returning home in 1783, he purchased the estate of Newfield, and m. in two years after, Margaret, eldest dau. of the late John M'Kerrell, Esq. of Hillhouse, by whom he had issue,

Lineage.

The family of Creswell, which has been in possession of considerable estates in the county of Salop for upwards of two centuries, was anciently seated at Barnehurst, in the parish of Tettenhall, co. Stafford, where it had a fine old manor house, and enjoyed an extensive property. The only vestige of the ancient mansion now left, is a square ivy-grown tower and gateway, which remain a pleasing relic of the architecture of olden times. The Creswells appear to have been established in Staffordshire from a very early period, and to have ever maintained a high position among its great landed proprietors. Shaw, in his History and Antiquities of the County, observes, that there was an estate called after their name near Stafford, where a branch of the family resided, and whence he considers that they originally sprung. The earliest ancestor from whom there is a clear and direct descent, is

THOMAS CRESWELL, de Barnhurst, Armiger, b. in 1465, who held that manor, with other lands in the parish of Tettenhall, and d. in 1544, leaving issue, RICHARD, his heir; and John, of Wolverhampton, who m. Elizabeth, youngest dau. of William Barnesley, Esq. of Trysull, co. Stafford, and had issue. The elder son,

RICHARD CRESWELL, Esq. of Barnehurst, b. in 1490, in addition to his paternal estates in Staffordshire, was seised of messuages and lands in Kent, held of Queen ELIZABETH by fealty. He d. 6 Nov. 1558, leaving a son,

RICHARD CRESWELL, Esq. of Barnehurst, merchant of the staple, who m. 1st, Joan, dau. of John Dyott, Esq. of Stichbrook and Lichfield, who d. 19 Oct. 1590; and 2ndly, Joyce, dau. of Robert Fowke, Esq., and widow of Walter Grosvenor. By his first wife, Mr. Creswell left issue four daus., Susannah, m. 1st, to John Elwes, Esq., and 2ndly, to Sir John Curzon, Knt.; Jane, wife of John Burrow, Esq.; Sarah, m. to William Alen; and Priscilla, m. to Matthew Babington, Esq. of Cossington; and three sons, of whom the eldest,

RICHARD CRESWELL, Esq. of Barnehurst, b. in 1578, m. Margery, only dau. and heiress of Reginald Fowke, Esq. of Gunston, and by her left, with five daus., (Dorothy, m. to William Moseley, Esq. of the Mere, co. Stafford; Mary, m. to William Chapman, Esq. of Prescott Grange, co. Stafford; Margery, m. to Thomas Lowe, Esq. of Higley, Salop; Margaret, m. to William Biggs, Esq., son and heir of Sir Anthony Biggs, Knt.; and Elizabeth, m. to Edward Butler, Esq. of London,) a son and successor,

He d. in 1704, and was s. by his only surviving son,

Wilts, together with other considerable estates in the same county. By the heiress of Pinkney, Mr. Creswell had two sons,

CROKE OF STUDLEY.

CROKE, GEORGE, Esq. of Studley Priory, co. Oxford, s. his father 27 Dec. 1842.

Lineage.

The surname of this family was originally LE BLOUNT, and Sir Alexander Croke claimed, in his History of the Blounts, to be representative of the senior branch of that ancient house, which had its own origin from the BLONDI, or BRONDI, of Italy. Its patriarchs, the COUNTS OF GUISNES, boasted alliance with most of the royal families of Europe, and counted amongst their progenitors, the Emperors and Kings of France, the Kings of Denmark, the Counts of Flanders, and the Guelphs, Dukes of Bavaria.

NICHOLAS LE BLOUNT, (son of Nicholas, and grandson of Sir Thomas le Blount, Lord of Belton, who was son of Sir Ralph Blount, elder brother of Sir William le Blount, ancestor of the BLOUNTS OF SODINGTON, MAPLE-DURHAM, &c.) having taken an active part in the insurrection, which proved so fatal to his cousin, Sir Thomas le Blount, was outlawed and forced to fly the kingdom. Repairing, with other refugees, to the court of Milan, he entered into the military service of the accomplished JOHN GALEAZZO VISCOMPTI, who was then at war with the Emperor, and who eventually, after routing them at Brescia, drove the imperialists out of Italy. The Duke acknowledged with gratitude the merits of the English, and the splendid rewards which he conferred upon them, were worthy of the magnificent house of VISCOMPTI. Nicholas le Blount subsequently returned to England, but in doing so adopted the precaution of changing his name, as did several other of his companions, amongst whom were JOHN CARRINGTON, who took the name of Smith, the ancestor of the extinct Lords Carrington, and William Fitzwilliams, who assumed that of English; Blount chose the cognomen of CROKE. The Crommelins are of French origin, and were possessed of considerable property at Armancour, a village near St. Quentins, in Picardy, when the revocation of the Edict of Nantes compelled them, being Protestants, to leave their native country.

Antrim, bringing with them a number of tradesmen, and a capital of 20,000*l.*, with which they established the linen manufacture, which was adopted by the natives, and has flourished ever since. In consideration of Louis Crommelin having spent 10,000*l.* on its establishment, King William, who was much interested in its success, and during his life granted 5*l.* for every loom, conferred on him a pension of 200*l.* a year for the life of his son, who, however, d. only three months after, when it was discontinued. ### Lineage.

The family of De la Croyz—De Cruce—Del Crosse—Crosse, as the name is variously spelt in ancient deeds—was originally seated in Wygan, co. Lancaster, in the reign of EDWARD I., and about the year 1350 were settled at Crosse Hall, in Liverpool, and subsequently obtained estates in Chorley, also denominated Crosse Hall. The first we find on record in the extensive collection of charters among the muniments preserved at Shaw Hill, is RICHARD DE LA CROYZ, living in the reign of EDWARD I., about 1272. ADAM DE CRUCE, "son of Richard De la Croyz," is mentioned in a deed, sans date, but about the year 1299, by which he bestowed lands in Wygan upon his daughter Elena. He had another dau. Margaret, and was succeeded by his son, JOHN DE CRUCE, who by deed, 27 EDWARD I., A.D. 1299, confirms his father's gift of lands to his sister Elena, in free marriage with Alan, the son of Walter De Wygan. He was living in 1325, and had issue, 1. Thurstan; 2. William; and 3. Matilda, wife of Henry Banastre, upon whom, 13 January (18 EDWARD II.) A.D. 1324, he entailed his estates on failure of issue of his sons, Thurstan and William.

THURSTAN DE CRUCE was succeeded by

—— DE CRUCE, living about 1360, whose son,

HUGO DEL CROSSE, was mayor of Wygan, 3rd RICH. II., A.D. 1379, and in 9 RICHARD II., A.D. 1386, in which same year Thomas De Crosse was mayor of Liverpool. He m. Katharine, widow of Thomas Del Hogh, and was s. by his son,

He was living 10 October (10 HENRY VI.), 1441. By his wife, Margaret, he had a son and successor,

JOHN CROSSE, mayor of Liverpool in 1460, who, by Agnes, his wife, a widow, 7 November, 1495, he had a dau., Margaret, m. to Richard Gillibrand, of Latham, and two sons, Richard and William; of whom the elder,

Letitia afterwards m. Thomas Norreys, of the Speke. Roger Crosse died without children, 22 April (14 HENRY VIII.), A.D. 1522, as appears by Inq. P. M. (22 HENRY VIII.), A.D. 1530, and was s. by his brother and heir,

He founded a grammar-school, free for all children of the name of Crosse, and a chantry in the chapel of St. Katharine, Liverpool, of which Humphry Crosse was the incumbent. ### Lineage.

"Workington (says Camden) is now the seat of the ancient knightly family of the CURWENS, descended from Gospatric, Earl of Northumberland, who took that name by covenant from Culwen, a family of Galloway, the heir whereof they had married. They have a stately castle-like seat; and from this family (increaseth vanity) I myself am descended by the mother's side." To

GOSPATRIC, son of Orme, and great-grandson of Eldred, second feudal Lord of Kendal, Alan, second Lord of Allerdale, his cousin-german, gave High Ireby, which remained vested in a younger branch of the Curwens, which terminated in female heirs. This Gospatric was the first of the family who was LORD OF WORKINGTON, having exchanged with his cousin, William de Lancaster, the lordship of Middleton, in Westmoreland, for the lands of Lamplugh and Workington, in Cumberland. Gospatric had, with four younger sons (Gilbert, Adam, Orme, and Alexander), his successor,

THOMAS, called after the fashion of those times, SON OF GOSPATRIC. To this Thomas, one Rowland, son of Ughtred, son of Fergus, gave the lordship of CULWEN, in Galloway. He d. 7 Dec. 1152, having had issue,

THOMAS, who m. Joan, dau. of Robert de Veteripont, but d. in the lifetime of his father, leaving an only dau., who m. Harrington, of Harrington.
PATRIC.
Alan, who acquired by gift of his brother Patric the lands of CAMERTON, and thence deriving their surname, the Camertons descend from him.

This Thomas, son of Gospatric, granted Lamplugh to Robert de Lamplugh and his heirs, to be holden by the yearly presentment of a pair of gilt spurs. To his second son, Patric, he had given, while his eldest son was living, the lordship of CULWEN, in Galloway, and the said Patric assuming his surname therefrom, became

PATRIC DE CULWEN ; his elder brother dying subsequently without male issue, he s. to the entire estate, and was thenceforward designated "Patric de Culwen, of Workington." He was s. by his eldest son,

THOMAS DE CULWEN, of Workington, who was s. at his decease by his brother,

GILBERT DE CULWEN, of Workington, who left, by his wife, Editha, a son and heir,

SIR GILBERT DE CULWEN, of Workington, who was returned to parliament by the county of Cumberland in the 47th, 48th, and 50th of EDWARD III. He d. in the seventh of the next reign, and was s. by his son,

SIR CHRISTOPHER DE CULWEN, of Workington. This gentleman, like his father, represented his native county in several parliaments. He was sheriff of the same shire in the 2nd and 12th of HENRY VI. by the name of CULWEN, and in the sixth of the same reign by that of CURWEN, to which latter cognomen the family has ever since adhered. Sir Christopher was s. by his son,

SIR THOMAS CURWEN, of Workington, M.P. for Cumberland, who d. 3rd EDWARD IV., and was s. by his son,

SIR CHRISTOPHER CURWEN, of Workington, living temp. HENRY VII., who left at his decease a son and successor,

SIR THOMAS CURWEN, of Workington, who d. in the 34th of HENRY VIII., and was s. by his son,

SIR HENRY CURWEN, of Workington, who had the honour of affording an asylum in his mansion-house to the Queen of Scotland, MARY STUART, when that unhappy Princess sought the protection of England, and had the good feeling to treat the fallen Sovereign with the deference due to her princely station, and the kindness claimed by her misfortunes. The Queen remained at Workington until removed by Elizabeth ; first, to Cockermouth Castle, and then to Carlisle. The apartment, in which her Majesty slept, bears still the name of the "Queen's Chamber." Sir Henry m. 1st, Mary, dau. of Sir Nicholas Fairfax, and had a son, NICHOLAS, his successor. He wedded 2ndly, Jane Crosby, and had, I. George, who d. s. p. ; and II. THOMAS, who left a son, DARCY, who had HENRY, and ELDRED, who s. his brother, and subsequently his cousin, HENRY CURWEN, Esq. of Workington, when he became representative of the family. This gentleman m. 1st, Catherine, dau. and co-heir of Sir John Dalston, and had two sons, PATRICK, his heir ; and Thomas. He m. 2ndly, Miss Margaret Wharton, and had a third son, ELDRED. He d. in the 21st of JAMES I., and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR PATRICK CURWEN, of Workington, M.P. for Cumberland, who was created a Baronet in 1626, but d. issueless, in 1664, when the title became extinct, while the estates devolved upon his brother,

THOMAS CURWEN, Esq. of Workington, at whose decease, unm., 25th CHARLES II., the estates passed to his half-brother,

ELDRED CURWEN, Esq. of Workington, who d. the next year, and was s. by his son,

HENRY CURWEN, Esq. of Workington. This gentleman dying without issue, his branch of the family expired, when the estates and representation reverted to his cousin (refer to descendants of Sir Henry Curwen by his second wife, Jane Crosby),

ELDRED CURWEN, Esq., who thus became "of Workington." Mr. Curwen served the office of sheriff for Cumberland in the 3rd of GEORGE II., and represented Cockermouth in parliament. He d. in the 18th of the same reign, and was s. by his son,

HENRY CURWEN, Esq. of Workington, M.P. for Carlisle in 1762, and for Cumberland in 1768. Mr. Curwen m. the dau. of William Gale, Esq. of Whitehaven, and had an only dau. and heiress,

Lineage.

The ancient and modern pronunciation of the name of this family, by the natives of Lancashire, is DU-ER-DEN; and JACOB, in his Law Dictionary, interprets it, "a thicket of wood in a valley," giving Cowel as his authority.

ELIAS DE DUREDEN occurs as a party to a bond between himself and Thomas Haworth de Haworth, in the parish of Rochdale, senior, dated 10 July, 23rd HENRY VI. He was the lineal ancestor of

OTTIWELL DEURDEN, of Whitfield, in the parish of Rochdale, mentioned in a lease of lands granted to his son,

OLIVER DEURDEN, son of Ottiwell, living at Whitfield, 26 Jan., 10th HENRY VIII.

RICHARD DEURDEN, s. to lands at Whitfield, which he resigned to his son, James, by deed, dated 16th Queen ELIZABETH (1574). He was buried at Rochdale, 14 Feb. 1586; and his widow, 3 Dec. 1590. He left issue,

I. JAMES, his heir.

Lineage.

This is one of the families which were driven out of Flanders in the reign of ELIZABETH by the persecution attending their religion.

OLIVER HORNE, alias DE HORNE, of Nova Kirk, near Ipres, Flanders, came over to England with his wife in the year 1596 or 1597, and settled at Norwich. "But not well liking a strange countery, and hearing of a cessation of the persecution in Flanders," says his great-grandson, "after his wife was delivered of a son, whom he named Abraham, the first in the register of that congregation there [the Dutch], leaving his small family to God Almighty's protection, he shipt himself for Flanders to seeke a settlement there again, but in his return was taken sick of the plague, and dyed on ship board." By Jocaminca Nevil (whose family had been, in 1571, driven out of Flanders by the persecution of the Duke of Alva, and were settled at Colchester, and who afterwards m. a Walloon at Norwich) he had issue only the child above alluded to,

ABRAHAM DE HORNE, of Colchester, Essex, b. in 1597, m. 1627, Mercy, dau. of William Rush, of the same place, (ancestor of the late Sir William-Beaumaris Rush, Knt., sheriff of Suffolk, 1800,) by whom he had, with several other children, who d. young,

DE LA CHEROIS OF DONAGHADEE.

DE LA CHEROIS, DANIEL, Esq. of Donaghadee, co. Down, b. 1 Dec. 1783; a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for the county, and high-sheriff in 1829.

Lineage.

The family of De la Cherois descends from the younger branch of an ancient and noble house in France, formerly resident at Cheroz or Cherois, a small town near Sens, in the province of Champagne, whence the name is derived. It had there, in the beginning of the seventeenth century, large possessions, and was allied to some of the first families in that country; among others, to the great one of Montmorency, in consequence of the marriage of Catherine de la Cherois with Jean, Seigneur de Beaurnez, whose daughter, Marguerite, m. Antoine De Montmorency.

The revocation of the Edict of Nantes, in the year 1685, compelled the De la Cherois', being Protestants, to abandon country, kindred, and fortune, to preserve their freedom of conscience, and in the hurry and distress unavoidably attendant upon so disastrous a flight, and consequent dispersion that ensued, many particulars relating to their family and history, together with other interesting documents, were inevitably destroyed.

In the year 1641,

CAPTAIN SAMUEL DE LA CHEROIS (ancestor of the branch of the family settled in Ireland) served in the war undertaken by the Cardinal de Richelieu against the House of Austria. He left three sons, NICHOLAS, appointed a lieutenant of Fusiliers by LOUIS XIV. in 1675, and promoted to the rank of captain in 1677; DANIEL and Bourjonval, both appointed lieutenants in their brother's company in 1677. In the year 1685, these three brothers fled to Holland, where they were received with great kindness by the Stadtholder, into whose service they entered, obtaining commissions in the Dutch army of the same rank as those they had held in that of France. In 1689, WILLIAM, Prince of Orange, being called to the throne of Great Britain, formed two regiments of the French Huguenots, of which Nicholas De la Cherois was appointed major, Daniel captain,* and Bourjonval lieutenant in the first, commanded by the Comte de Marton. They accompanied King WILLIAM to Ireland in 1690, and finally settled there. The eldest,

MAJOR NICHOLAS DE LA CHEROIS, distinguished him-

* Daniel, the second brother, was appointed Governor of Pondicherry, in the East Indies, by King WILLIAM, in 1693, and m. Mademoiselle Crommelin, by whom he had issue one dau., Mary-Angelica, who m. 1st, — Greueber, Esq. of Feversham, and 2ndly, the Hon. Thomas Montgomery, afterwards last Earl of Mount Alexander, who dying without issue, left his widow sole heiress of all his estates in the county of Down, which are now in possession of Daniel De la Cherois, Esq. of Donaghadee, and Nicholas De la Cherois-Crommelin, Esq., to whom they have descended.

Bourjonval De la Cherois was killed at Dungannon, in an engagement with the rebels, unm.

Two ladies, Judith and Louise De la Cherois, aunts of the family, afterwards joined them, having succeeded in making their escape from France in an almost miraculous manner, having been obliged to travel on horseback during the night, and conceal themselves in the woods during the day; their only remaining possessions being their jewels, which they had sewn in their clothes. Judith lived to the great age of 113 years; both d. unm.

self at the Battle of the Boyne, and afterwards performed a very gallant action, making fifteen hundred men lay down their arms with only a subaltern's guard, for which he was presented by the government with fifteen hundred crowns and a Lieutenant-Colonelcy. He m. Mary, dau. of Samuel Crommelin, and left a dau., Madelaine, wife of Daniel Crommelin, Esq. of Lisburn, and a son,

SAMUEL DE LA CHEROIS, who m. Mademoiselle Sarah Cormiere, and had issue,

I. DANIEL, his heir.

The eldest son,

DANIEL DE LA CHEROIS, Esq. of Donaghadee, m. 13 Feb. 1782, Mary, dau. of Alexander Crommelin, Esq., and by her had issue,

DANIEL, now of Donaghadee.
Samuel-Lewis, m. in 1820, Mary, dau. of John Roland, and d. in 1836, having had issue, Nicholas, Daniel, Samuel, Lewis, Alexander, and Jane.

DELAFIELD OF FIELDSTON.

DELAFIELD, JOSEPH, Esq. of Leybourne Grange, co. Kent, representative in England of the ancient family of DELAFIELD OF FIELDSTONE, s. his father. He is a Count of the Holy Roman Empire.

Lineage.

The family of De la Feld descend from the ancient Counts of La Feld, in Alsace, who long resided at the chateau that still bears their name, situated in a pass of the Vosges mountains, three days' journey from Colmar. Pope Leo IX., a native of Alsace, is said to have rested at this princely castle when he visited Strasburgh. There were, previous to 1533, stately monuments to two of the Counts of La Feld in the cathedral church of Strasburgh, to which this family had been considerable benefactors at the time of its rebuilding, under the venerable Bishop Werenhaire. A perpetual chantry was also founded in the same cathedral by these Counts, with a pension of two marks per annum for a priest to celebrate daily service therein, for the repose of their souls and those of their ancestors. This family have, however, for many years been settled in England and in Ireland, being possessed of considerable estates in both countries. The present head of it is a claimant by descent of the ancient Barony of Fitzwarine (see the extinct title of that name).

It is probable that HUBERTUS DE LA FELD was the first of his race that emigrated to England; and that he came over with the CONQUEROR, his name appearing enrolled as the owner of lands in the county of Lancaster, in the third of WILLIAM I. The name of JOHN DE LA FELD occurs in the 12th of HENRY I., as a proprietor in the counties of Lancaster and Bucks; of ROBERT DE LA FELD, without a date, and of JOHN DE LA FELD, in the 38th and 43rd of HENRY III. The last mentioned person,

JOHN DE LA FELD, witnessed two deeds in the same years on the marriages of his son and dau., viz., JOHN, of whom presently, and ELIZABETH, who m. (43rd HENRY III.) Norman D'Arcy, of Nocton, co. Lincoln. The son,

JOHN DE LA FELD, m. in the 38th of HENRY III., Elizabeth Fitzwarine (whose father was Lord Warden of the Marches in the North), and had three sons, JOHN, Robert or Hubert, and Nicholas, of whom the eldest,

JOHN DE LA FELD, m. in the 15th of EDWARD I., Maude, dau. and heir of Montacute, by whom he had two sons, ROBERT, or HUBERT, and John, Canon of the Abbey church, at Hereford. The elder,

ROBERT (or HUBERT) DE LA FELD, m. in the 11th of EDWARD II., his cousin, the dau. and heir of Fulke Fitzwarine, and was s. by his son,

JOHN DE LA FELD, who m. in the 23rd of EDWARD III., Margaret de Tyringham, and had three sons, THOMAS, Robert, and Nicholas. The eldest,

THOMAS DE LA FELD, wedded, in the 45th EDWARD III., Elizabeth, his kinswoman, dau. of Thomas Butler, second son of Thomas, Earl of Ormonde, and great-great-granddau. of Elizabeth De la Feld, wife of Norman D'Arcy. He fell, soon after his marriage, in the French wars, and leaving no issue, was s. by his brother,

ROBERT DE LA FELD, who m. in the 51st of EDWARD III., Elinor Butler, sister of his brother's wife, and co-heir with her of their father, the Hon. Thomas Butler. By this lady he had, with a dau., Anne, abbess of a convent at Lancaster, a son and successor,

ROBERT DE LA FELD, who m. 12th of HENRY IV., Alice, dau. and heiress of Sir Reginald de Grey, and was s. by his son,

This gentleman m. in the 16th Henry VI., Katherine, only dau. of Sir Thomas de Rochfort,* by whom (who wedded 2ndly, Thomas Luttrell, Esq. of Luttrelstown, ancestor of the Earls of Carhampton) he had a son,

SIR JOHN DELAFELD, who m., 35th HENRY VI., Elizabeth, sister of Sir Richard Hankford,† and had issue,

The elder son,

SIR THOMAS DELAFIELD, m., 21st EDWARD IV., Margaret, dau. and heir of Ralph Howard (descended from the Howards of Fersfield), and had a son, JOHN, and a dau., Isabel; which John having removed with the court to Calais in 1500, on account of a great pestilence then raging in England, and not returning for several years, it was supposed by his family that he had perished; and ISABEL, his only sister, being m. to Gerald Fitzgerald, of Alloone (descended from Maurice, first Knight of Kerry, and son of John, fourth Lord of Offaley), took the lordship of Culduffe into that family, for which the Fitzgeralds of Alloone quartered the arms of Delafield. In BURKE'S Extinct and Dormant Peerage there is an evident mistake regarding this Lord Fitz Warine and his descendants, who are confounded with those of Robert, Lord Fitzpayne. Lord Fitzwarine left an only son, IVO or JOHN FITZWARINE, who was with the Earl of Buckingham at the siege of Nantz, and after that, in 9th RICHARD II., with the Duke of Lancaster, in his naval expedition for the recovery of the inheritance of Constance, his wife, heir to the kingdom of Castile. ### Lineage.

"A respectable family in Ireland, of the name of Delap," says Robertson, in his history of "Ayrshire Families," "appears to be descended from Allan Dunlop, Provost of Irvine, &c. in 1625, on the following grounds:—Their more immediate ancestor, as appears from their family writs, was Hugh Dunlop, who left Scotland early in the seventeenth century, and who was the son of Allan Dunlop, a man of considerable property in the town of Irwine, whose wife's name was Montgomery. This Hugh settled at Sligo, in Ireland, where he died in 1641, leaving a son, John, who went afterwards, for a short time, to Scotland to dispose of his property there, and make a settlement with the sisters, six in number, of his father, Hugh. There is an old tombstone of the family remaining in the churchyard of the parish where they originally settled; but the earliest dates are worn out, only a figure of a spread-eagle, the arms of Dunlop, is still distinctly to be seen upon it."

DENNISTOUN OF DENNISTOUN.

Dennistoun, James, Esq. of Dennistoun, b. in 1803; a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant, and member of the faculty of Advocates, s. his father, 1 June, 1834, m. in 1835, Isabella-Katharina, eldest dau. of the Hon. James-Wolfe Murray, of Cringletie, one of the Senators of the College of Justice in Scotland.

Lineage.

All the peerage writers, and genealogical antiquaries of Scotland are agreed that this ancient family ranks with the most eminent in the western districts of that kingdom. Without reference to the doubtful authority of Buchanan, of Auchmar, who asserts it to be a younger branch of the proud Earls of Lennox, and to have had large possessions on the Endrick, in 1016, it appears from a charter of Malcolm IV., who d. in 1165, that the Dennistouns held lands on the Gryfe, in Renfrewshire, in that monarch's reign. Here, it would seem, that one Danziel, or Daniel, probably of Norman extraction, settled himself, and, calling the estate Danzielstoun, assumed therefrom his surname. After passing through various changes, this orthography took its present shape about the end of the sixteenth century. Confining our details rigidly to the evidence of authentic documents, we deduce the genealogy from

Sir Hugh de Danzielstoun, of that ilk, who flourished during the fatal wars of the Scottish succession, and, with other patriotic barons of his country, accorded a reluctant submission to the victorious Edward, in 1296. He had issue,

John (Sir), his successor.
Joanna, or Janet, who m. Sir Adam More, of Rowallan, and was mother of Elizabeth More, whose marriage with King Robert II. became a fruitful ground of controversy among historians. From this union, in 1347, sprang the long line of the Stuart monarchs, through whom the Imperial crown has passed to the reigning dynasty. In reference to this circumstance, the proud proverb has been preserved by the Dennistouns, "Kings came of us, not we of Kings."

Sir Hugh was s. by his son,

Sir John de Danzielstoun, of that ilk, who, during the reign of David II. was the constant associate in arms of his illustrious father-in-law, the Earl of Wigton, and of the brave Sir Robert Erskine. Through life, himself and his son, Sir Robert, maintained a devoted loyalty, with a steadiness as exemplary as it was rare, in an age when the haughty nobles of Scotland often sought to extend their individual influence by trampling on the prerogatives of the crown. Offices of high trust were conferred upon him, and the accession of his relation, Robert II., was followed by new honours, and by grants of many splendid baronies in various counties. He was for many years high-sheriff of Dumbartonshire, and governor of Dumbarton Castle, the strongest fortress in the kingdom, and was one of the lords of parliament who concurred in the settlement of the crown upon the descendants of his niece, Elizabeth More. He m. Mary, dau. of Malcolm, 1st Earl of Wigton, who is lineally represented by the heir of this marriage, and had (with one dau., Janet, wife of Sir Adam Mure, of Rowallan, five sons, Robert, his heir; Walter, a bold and turbulent churchman, made Bishop of St. Andrew's by Robert III.; William (Sir,) of Colgrain; Hugh; and Malcolm. The eldest son and heir,

Sir Robert de Danzielstoun, of that ilk, was one of the youths selected from the chief families in Scotland, in 1357, as hostages for the ransom of King David II.; and, in 1370, was commissioner for a treaty of peace with England. Identified with his distinguished father in loyalty and valour, he enjoyed a like portion of royal favour, and succeeded him in the high trusts of sheriff of the county, and keeper of the Castle of Dumbarton, which he held to his death. His daus. and co-heirs were,

I. Margaret, m. to Sir William de Cunninghame, of Kilmaurs; hence sprang the Earls of Glencairn.
II. Elizabeth, m. to Sir Robert Maxwell, of Calderwood, and from her sprang the Baronets of Calderwood and Pollock, and the Lords Farnham.

After the decease of Sir Robert, the male line of the family was carried on by his brother,

Sir William de Danzielstoun, of Colgrain, co. Dumbarton, which estate, and that of Camis Eskau, in the same shire, he acquired before 1377, and had several other grants from the crown. From these we learn that he held preferment in the household of Robert III., and of that monarch's eldest son, the unfortunate Earl of Carrick, and on his death, in 1393, his widow, the Lady Marjory, had a pension from the king's chamberlain. His direct descendant,

Robert Danzielstoun, of Colgrain, associated himself with William, 4th Earl of Glencairn, in his machinations and correspondence with Henry VIII. of England. For this he was attainted; but in 1546 had a remission, under the Great Seal, for all treasons and crimes committed by him along with the Earl. The same active and turbulent spirit led him afterwards to take part in the raids then frequent amongst the border clans of the Highlands, in which he seems to have been both an actor and a sufferer. His wife was Katharine, dau. of David Semple, of Noblestoun, by Marion, dau. of Sir William Edmonston, of Duntreath. They left, with other issue, I. Robert, heir; and, II. John, living in 1560, father, by his wife, Euphemia Bontyne, of Walter Danzielstoun, who, like his predecessor, resided at Colgrain. He d. in 1618, leaving, with several younger children, John Dennistoun, who, by Margaret, dau. and eventual heiress of the ancient family of Spreull of Dalchurne, had a son, Archibald Dennistoun, of Dalchurne, minister of Campsie, who m. 1st, Jane, dau. of Humphry Noble, of Farme and Ardardan, and 2ndly, Katharine, dau. of James Stirling, of Auchyle. By the former he had a son, WILLIAM, of whom in the sequel, as heir-male of the family, and husband of the HEIRESS OF COLGRAIN. The son and heir,

ROBERT DANZIELSTOUN, of Colgrain, m. Margaret, dau. of John Hamilton, of Ferguslie, and, among other children, who left no issue, had Elizabeth, the wife of John Colquhoun, of Camstraddan; Catherine, m. to John Macgregor, of Ardenconnal; and his successor,

JAMES DENNISTOUN, of Colgrain, who, being a person of facile and extravagant disposition, impaired and involved the family inheritance to a considerable extent. His son and heir,

WALTER DENNISTOUN, of Colgrain, m. 1st, Sarah, dau. of Sir Patrick Houston, of Houston, by the Lady Janet Cunninghame, and 2ndly, Grace, dau. of John Brisbane, of Brisbane; by the former he had James, who d. unm., and an elder son, his successor,

JOHN DENNISTOUN, of Colgrain, who, during the wars of the Commonwealth, continued a zealous and steady adherent of the Royal cause, and ultimately crowned his exertions by the sacrifice of his life. After a short but romantic campaign, the little army assembled under the Earl of Glencairn was disbanded in the next autumn, when John Dennistoun was specially included in the treaty of surrender, and his real and personal estates were exempted from attainder. This benefit he did not long enjoy, but died the ensuing year, after lingering sufferings from a wound received in the Highland expedition. He m. Jean, dau. of William Semple, of Fulwood, and had three daus., viz.,

I. MARGARET, who s. to the estates in virtue of an entail made by her father, under condition of marrying the HEIR MALE of the family.
II. Jean.
III. Janet, m. to William Semple, of Fulwood.

On the decease of Colonel Dennistoun, the male representation devolved upon the elder son and heir of Mr. Archibald Dennistoun, of Dalchurne, minister of Campsie,

WILLIAM DENNISTOUN, who, under the settlement of Colonel Dennistoun, became the husband of his eldest dau., Margaret, heiress of Colgrain. Small, however, was the heritage thus re-united to the representation of this ancient house. The embarrassments, which had gradually increased during the Civil Wars, in which the laird was on the losing side, were fatally augmented by the selfish mismanagement during the minority of the heiress: a long life of prudent economy was inadequate to retrieve the estate, and William's patrimony of Dalchurne was entirely lost. In one respect this was fortunate, as it perhaps prevented his taking the active part in politics which his Jacobite zeal might in other circumstances have suggested. Of sixteen children, one only survived their parents, viz.,

JOHN DENNISTOUN, of Colgrain, who freed the property from debt, and by Jane, heiress of Moses Buchanan, of Glins, had, beside several daus.,

JAMES DENNISTOUN, of Colgrain. This laird m. 1st, Janet, dau. of John Baird, of Craigtown, and by her left, JAMES, his successor, and Jean, m. to Andrew Buchanan, of Ardinconnal. He m. 2ndly, Mary, dau. of John Lyon, of Parklee, and had three other children, viz.

I. Robert, m. to Anne-Penelope, dau. of Archibald Campbell, of Jura, and had issue.
II. RICHARD, who purchased KELVIN GROVE, co. Lanark, and took his designation from that estate. He m. Christian, dau. of James Alston, merchant in Glasgow, heir to the estate of Westerton, co. Dumbarton, and left surviving issue,
  Richard. William.
  Isabella, m. to Colin Campbell, Esq., son of Archibald Campbell, Esq. of Jura, and has issue.
  Mary, m. to the late Archibald Buchanan, Esq. of Auchintorlie, co. Dumbarton, and has issue.
I. MARY, m. to John Alston, of Westerton, and has issue.

Colgrain d. in 1796, and was s. by his eldest son,

JAMES DENNISTOUN, of Colgrain. This gentleman was convener of the county of Dumbarton for nearly thirty years; during a great part of the time he held the appointment of vice-lieutenant, and commanded the regiment of local militia of that shire. By Margaret, his 1st wife, dau. of James Donald, of Geilstoun, he left JAMES, his heir; and by Margaret, his 2nd wife, dau. of Allan Dreghorn, of Blochairn, he left four daus., co-heirs to their mother's large fortune, viz.,

ISABELLA-BRYSON, m. to Gabriel-Hamilton Dundas, of Westburn and Duddingstoun, and has issue.
JANET-BAIRD, m. to Hugh Maclean, of Coll, and has issue.
ELIZABETH-DREGHORN, m. 22 Feb. 1815, to Sir Duncan Campbell, Bart. of Barcaldine, and has issue.
MARY-LYON, m. to Sir William Baillie, Bart. of Polkemmet, and has issue.

He was s. at his decease, in 1816, by his only son,

JAMES DENNISTOUN, of Dennistoun, who inherited the estates of Colgrain and Camis Eskau; and in 1828, on the production of the most satisfactory evidence of his descent, obtained from the Lord Lyon of Scotland authority to bear the arms and style proper to the baronial house of DE DANZIELSTOUN, of that ilk. He commanded the yeomanry cavalry of Dumbartonshire, and served as a deputy-lieutenant. By Mary Ramsay, his wife, dau. of George Oswald, of Auchencruive, he had issue,

I. JAMES, his heir. II. George. III. Richard, d. in 1829.
IV. Robert. V. Alexander.
I. Margaret. II. Isabella. III. Mary.

Lineage.

Some ancient deeds relating to the lordships of Lanquian, Lanblythyan, and Landough, in the neighbourhood of Cowbridge, co. ROBERT DE WINTONA, or WINCESTRIA, came into Glamorganshire with Robert Fitzhamon: he was lord of the manor of Lanquian, near Cowbridge, and built a castle there, the ruins of which are still extant; the valley underneath is called Pant Wilkyn (Wilkyn's vale) to this day. ### Lineage.

Of the great house of Digby, which for centuries past has stood pre-eminent in the rank of British aristocracy, pedigrees are to be found in numerous County and genealogical works. Of these, the fullest, perhaps, is that given by Pennant, in his Tour from Chester to London, and that writer states, that he derived the information on which he founded it, "from the extensive genealogy of the family, compiled at the cost of fourteen hundred pounds, by the famous Sir Kenelm Digby, in the year 1634, with the use of which his neighbour, Watkin Williams, had favoured him."

EVERARD DIGBIE, of Tilton, Digbie, and Drystoke, who fell at Towton, fighting under the Lancastrian banner, left by Jacqueta, his wife, dau. and co-heir of Sir John Ellys, seven sons,

I. EVERARD (Sir), Knt., Lord of Tilton and Drystoke, who d. in 1509, leaving a son and heir, SIR EVERARD DIGBY, ancestor of the celebrated SIR KENELM DIGBY.

He is a Fellow of the Royal Society, and member of several other scientific societies.

Lineage.

By a pedigree preserved in the Harleian Collection, No. 6831, this family is traced from Sir John Dilwyn, of Dilwyn, co. Hereford; but it appears by some Records in the Heralds' Office, that the name was originally De Luen, and that Sir John De Luen was probably one of those Normans who accompanied Bernard Newmarch in his invasion of Breconshire, in 1100. That the family, though settled for several centuries in Breconshire, was not originally Welsh, is confirmed by the charter which HENRY VI. granted, in 1448, to the town of Brecon, for the seventy-three burgesses, among whom Hugh Dilwyn is named, are said to be all "English people," and the grant is curiously limited "to them and their heirs being English, both on the father's and mother's side." Towards the close of the seventeenth century, most of the descendants of

JEFFREYS DILWYN, of Langorse, adopted the Welsh custom by taking the surname of Jeffreys, and about the year 1699,

WILLIAM DILWYN emigrated from Breconshire, with his friend, Governor Penn, to Philadelphia. He was father of

JOHN DILLWYN, of Philadelphia, Esq., who m. Susanna, dau. and heiress of George Painter, of Haverford, in Pennsylvania, and formerly of Broomhill, in the parish of Dale, co. Pembroke, and had a son,

Lineage.

The family of DISNEY, anciently written DE ISNEY and D'EISNEY, and deriving its patronymic from Isigny, a bourg near Bayeux, in Normandy, came into England at the Conquest, as attested by the different copies of the Battle Abbey Roll. Leland, in his Itinerary, p. 29, in enumerating the gentry of the Kestevin division of Lincolnshire, mentions "Disney, alias De Iseney; he dwelleth at Diseney, and of his name and line be gentilmen of Fraunce. Ailesham Priory, by Thorney Courtoise, was of the Diseney's foundation, and there were divers of them buryed, and likewise at Diseney."

LAMBERT DE ISNEY, of Norton D'Isney, in the wapentake of Boothby Graffoe, and part of Kesteven, in Lincolnshire, is the first mentioned in the records of this kingdom, and the ancestor of the Disneys of Norton D'Isney, a knightly race of high station and influence, intermarrying with the Lords Bardolph, Grey de Ruthyn, the Feltons, Nevils, Skipwiths, Ormesbys, Dives, Husseys, &c., many of their wives being heiresses. ## DOD OF EDGE.

DOD, CHARLOTTE, of Edge Hall, co. Chester, s. her father in 1829, married.

Lineage.

HOVA, son of Cadwgan Dot, the founder of this family, about the time of HENRY II., having m. the dau. and heir of the Lord of Edge, in Cheshire, obtained one-fourth of that manor, and settled there. The name of this feudal lord is not ascertained, but the presumption is that he was the son of Edwin, a Saxon thane, who was allowed, after the Norman conquest, to retain possession of his lands at Edge, in Cheshire. "Presuming this descent," says Ormerod, "it is impossible to overlook the following particulars:—Dot, the Saxon lord of sixteen manors, either exclusively, or of a considerable proportion thereof, was joint Lord of Cholmondeley, Hampton, Groppenhall, and two-thirds of Bickerton, with this very Edwin. Dot was ejected from all his manors; and the circumstance of the heiress of the relics of Edwin's lands matching herself with a man who bore the name of one so closely connected with her apparent ancestor (prefixing thereto the addition of a name derived from the land to which that friend of her ancestor would be most likely to fly for shelter), seems to make this marriage the result of old family friendship and alliance, and to lead to a deduction of Cadwgan Dot, from the Dot of Domesday. A descent in the male line of a Saxon, noticed in that record, would be unique in the county of Chester." The Dod pedigree, entered by Baron Dod, in the Visitation of 1613, gives four descents after Cadwgan, and again commences with Hova Dod, after which it proceeds in a clear descent.* The last named

HOVA DOD, had two sons; the younger, John, of Smith's Pentrey, in Broxton, m. Margery, dau. of Hugh Le Byrd, of Broxton; and the elder,

The present seat is of considerable antiquity, but has been so repeatedly altered in various styles, that no date can be inferred from its architecture. This house has also been moated, and stands very low, the ground sloping to it in almost every direction; at the back is a park-like enclosure, ascending gently to a terrace, on the summit of a rocky eminence, well planted with trees, through the interstices of which the eye commands the higher Broxton and Bickerton hills behind, and in front, the Clwydian range, with loftier mountains above them, seen over the broad vale of Chester. On the right the estuaries appear in the distance, and on the left is a boundless continuation of the magnificent vale below, broken in some places by the Montgomeryshire hills, and completely losing itself in the vista.

Lineage.

King HENRY III., A.D. 1235, in the nineteenth year of his reign, gave to "Cotterel" the Norman, two oxgates of land in Tadington and in Prestclive, in the co. of Derby: he was father of "John Cotterell," who is mentioned in a subsequent charter as being the son of "Cotterel the Norman." Amongst a number of documents wherein the family are mentioned at this period, the "Originalia" states that in "the year 1311, 4th of EDWARD II., John, son of Henry de Derleye, and Matilda, his wife, levied a fine with the king for a moiety of the manor of Duleye, which was held of the king in chief, and which moiety had been taken into the king's hands, because they had purchased it from 'William Cotterel' without the king's licence," whom the Monasticon Anglicanum thus mentions: "Willielmus Cotterel dedit aulam vocatam 'Gysours Hall' in civitate Londini in Parochia Sanctæ Mildredæ cum aliis diversis tenementis et redditibus in Flete Street, et pasturam vocatam Siketsfield, A.D. 1336." It appears from the Patent Rolls in the Tower, that EDWARD III., A.D. 1357, granted to John Cotterel and Nicholas Seward, the office of comptrollers of the king's works, and that in 1397, in the twentieth year of his reign, that RICHARD II. confirmed "to John Cotterell, kinsman of J. Cotterel, who was son of the Norman, of Tadington, the above-mentioned grants of EDWARD III., in soccage for the rent of ten shillings per annum;" and another grant "to Thomas Cotterel, by the Abbot of St. Remigius, of all his lands and tenements in his lordship of Lappeley, in the co. of Stafford, at a rent of twelve shillings, which the king confirmed," A.D. 1381. We will pass over a number of other grants to the family, from this period to the year 1599, when, as appears by the Originalia, Queen ELIZABETH granted to Ralph Cotterell and Robert Boothe, lands in the co. of Nottingham; and to Ambrose Cotterell, in Berkshire; and in 1622, to Sir Clement Cotterell, Knt., JAMES I. granted lands in Lincolnshire. Mr. Drake, who is a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for the counties of Devon and Cornwall, s. to the representation of a branch of the "Drakes of Ashe," on the demise of his father in 1806.

Lineage.

The antiquaries of Devon all concur in describing this family as being of considerable antiquity in that county. Sir William Pole makes mention of Roger le Drak, who, in 31 EDWARD I. (1303,) held Hurnford cum Terra de la Wood, of Dertington, at half a knight's fee, and prior to that, of others of the family who were possessed of several lands in the county of Devon; but the first ancestor of whom there is to be found authentic record, and from whom lineal descent can be deduced, was

JOHN DRAKE, Esq. of Exmouth, co. Devon, described as "a man of great estate, and a name of no less antiquity." He m. temp. HENRY V., Christiana, elder dau. and co-heir of John Billet,* Esq. of Ashe, by which alliance the estate of Ashe, in the parish of Musbury, accrued to the Drake family. He was s. by his son and heir,

JOHN DRAKE, Esq., who was of Otterton, in the hundred of East Budleigh, m. Christiana, dau. and heiress of John Antage, Esq. His son,

JOHN DRAKE, was also of Otterton, and m. a dau. of John Cruwys, Esq., the then representative of the ancient house of Cruwys of Cruwys Morchard.†

JOHN DRAKE, Esq., the fourth of that name, of Otterton, by his wife, Agneta, dau. of John Keloway, Esq., had issue, 1. JOHN, his heir; 2. Richard; 3. Robert; and 4. Thomas, Esq. of Hortford, co. Devon, m. Ellen, dau. of Bennett Hilton, of South Awtry, co. Devon, and had issue three sons and two daughters.

* The estate of Ashe, situate in the parish of Musbury, in the hundred of Axminster, gave name to the family of De Esse, or Ashe, who possessed it by gift of the Courtenays at an early period, and from them it descended, by marriages, as follows:—HENRY DE ESSE had issue, Hawsea, dau. and heiress, who m. ALEXANDER DE LA FORDE, of Ford, who, by Margaret, dau. of Vere, had a dau. and heiress, Hawsea, who m. JOHN DE ORWEY (son of JOHN DE ORWEY, who wedded Johanna, dau. and heiress of ROBERT DE OSWELL), and had issue, Philippa, dau. and heiress, who intermarried with WILLIAM HAMPTON, and had issue, WARREN HAMPTON, who, by Johanna, his wife, had Alis, dau. and heiress, who wedded JOHN BILLET.

The manor of Musbury was, at a later period, also the inheritance of the Drakes; John Drake, of Ashe, Esq., having purchased it from Sir Edward North, to whom it was given, on the attainder of Courtenay, Marquis of Exeter, anno 1538.

† The family of Cruwys, we believe, became extinct in the male line on the death of Dr. Henry-Shortrudge Cruwys, in 1804; and the manor of Cruwys Morchard, which was in that family as early as the reign of King JOHN, and the lord of which had formerly the power of inflicting capital punishment (Hundred Roll), descended to his dau. and co-heiress, Mrs. Sharland.

JOHN DRAKE, the eldest son and heir, was of Exmouth and Ashe. He m. Margaret, dau. and heiress of John Cole, Esq. of Rill, in the parish of Withecombe Ralegh, co. Devon. This John Drake brought his Formedon against Simon Francheney, and recovered the estate of Ashe from him, who held it as being son and heir of Christopher Francheney, which Christopher was son and heir of Christiana Billet, by a second marriage with Richard Francheney. The estate descended from that time in the direct male line of the Drake family, until the year 1733, when, on the death of the last representative of the eldest line of the family, it fell into the hands of his widow, and became the inheritance of strangers. He d. leaving issue three sons,

I. JOHN, of whom presently.
II. John (a second son of the same name), who is mentioned by Sir William Pole to have been "a great merchantman." He m. Margaret, dau. of William Auerst, Esq. of Exeter, and relict of Richard Martyn. He was possessed of the estate at Rill, as also of the manor of Withecomb, de jure mat., both of which on his death descended to his elder dau. and co-heir, viz.,
  Juliana, m. to Thomas Raymond, of Chard.
  A second dau., whose Christian name does not appear, m. — May.
III. Gilbert, of Spratshays, in the parish of Littleham, in the hundred of East Budleigh, co. Devon, m. 2ndly, (who his first wife was does not appear,) Katherine, dau. of William Shearman, of Ottery St. Mary, by whom he left three sons and one dau.,

Lineage.

This family, and those of Ashe and Shardeloes, derive from a common progenitor, but the settlement in Ireland must have taken place at a remote period, for we find the "Drake of Drakerath" a distinguished person in the annals of that kingdom throughout the turbulent and tyrannic rule of the TUDORS and the STUARTS, the sanguinary despotism of CROMWELL, and the confiscating reign of WILLIAM.

The mansion of Drakerath was situated in the barony of Kells, in the co. of Meath, (where the ruins still remain,) and was erected by a member of the family of Drake of Ashe, in the co. of Devon, who acquired large estates in that part of Ireland, and settled there. Those estates continued vested in his descendants until the rebellion of 1641, when they were forfeited, but a small portion was subsequently restored by the Court of Claims in the beginning of CHARLES II.'s reign. A cadet of the family, Captain Peter Drake, a soldier of fortune, who followed the wars through all the fields of Europe in the beginning of the last century, published a very amusing detail of his adventures, which he begins with the situation of his house at the time of the Revolution. "I was born," he says, "12 Oct. 1671. My father's name was George; he was eldest son of William Drake, of Drakerath, and m. Elizabeth, eldest dau. of Patrick Stanley, Esq. of Marlstown, in the co. of Louth, and niece of John Stanley, Esq. of Finner, near Slane, in Meath. The family remained in peaceable possession of the estate from their first arrival until the war of 1641, when, with many more, they forfeited, and were driven to shift for themselves. At the beginning of CHARLES II.'s reign, there was a court of claims set on foot, by which a few of the proprietors were restored, and my father was of the number. He became, however, possessed only of a part, and was at the eve of being restored to the whole, when an order came from the king to dissolve the court, so that an end for that time was put to his hopes. My father had some time before this, with his family, settled in the co. of Kildare, having taken some lands from William, Lord Dungan, (to whom he had the honour of being related,) at Kildroughet, where he built a handsome seat. Here he continued until the Revolution, when his affairs took a new turn. Some time before, or about the beginning of the troubles, Lord Dungan was created Earl of Limerick, and, if I remember rightly, constituted governor of that city; thither his lordship repaired, taking my father with him, whom he soon after promoted. He was appointed one of the commissioners of the Customs, and chief comptroller of the Mint. As soon as King JAMES came to Dublin, and called a parliament, my father was put into the commission of the peace for the co. of Kildare, and declared himself a candidate for the borough of Navan. He was at the same time restored to the remainder of his estates, after which he returned to Limerick, to fulfil his official duties. In June, 1690, he came to visit his family, and settle his affairs; but the loss of the battle of the Boyne (which happened July 1, following) obliged him with all expedition to move off with his family for Limerick, staying but one day after the battle to inter Lord Dungan, only son to the Earl of Limerick, who was that day killed by a cannon-ball, and brought to Castletown, the earl his father's seat. This melancholy affair being at an end, the next day we set forward on our journey. Arriving at Limerick, we found all hands employed in repairing the old, and throwing up new works for the defence of the place, which was soon after besieged; the particulars of which are so well known already, that it would be needless to descend to minute relation."

From the Irish records it appears that, in the 9th of RICHARD II., the King conceded to RICHARD DRAKE, of Drakestown, the office of high-sheriff of the county of Meath; and that, in the 9th of HENRY V., the same appointment was granted to John Drake, of Drakestown, to be held during pleasure. Among the other early ancestry of the family, Catherine, sister and heiress of Nicholas Drake, of Drakerath, m. Richard Nugent, second Baron of Delvin, living in 1428; and about the same period, Sir Christopher Barnewall, of Crickstown, lord high treasurer of Ireland, m. Matilda, dau. of the then Drake of Drakerath.

The immediate progenitor of the family before us,

COLUMBUS DRAKE, Esq. of Drakerath, in Meath, son of Patrick Drake, Esq., was b. in 1670, and m. in 1705, Anne, only dau. of Jennett, Esq. of Oldbridge, co. Louth, who was slain at the battle of the Boyne, in 1688, together with all his sons, except the youngest, then in infancy. This child and his sister, afterwards Mrs. Drake, were saved in a singular manner, by a faithful servant, who secreted them in baskets, and thus conveyed them across the river after the conflict. Mr. Drake left at his decease (with three daus., the eldest, m. to William Cruise, Esq. of Mydoragh; the second, to Curtis, Esq. of Mount Hanover; and the third, who d. unm.) a son and successor,

PATRICK DRAKE, Esq. of Drakerath, b. in 1712, who m. in 1747, Frances, third dau. of James O'Reilly, Esq. of Roristown, co. Meath, and had two sons and three daus., viz.,

COLUMBUS DRAKE, Esq. of Roristown, b. in 1750, m. 13 Oct. 1777, Anne, only dau. of Christopher Barnewall, Esq. of Fyanstown Castle, in Meath, and had issue,

PATRICK, b. in 1782, d. in 1801.
CHRISTOPHER, successor to his father.
Cecilia, m. in 1796, to James Archbold O'Reilly, Esq. of Rahattan, co. Wicklow.

ERLE-DRAX OF CHARBOROUGH.

DRAX-ERLE SAWBRIDGE, JOHN-SAMUEL-WANLEY, Esq. of Charborough Park, co. Dorset, and of Ellerton Abbey, in Yorkshire, M.P. for Wareham, b. 6 Oct. 1800; m. 1 May, 1827, at St. George's Church, Hanover Square, London, Jane-Frances, only dau. of Richard-Erle-Drax Grosvenor, Esq., and has issue, Maria-Caroline. Sarah-Frances-Elizabeth.

This gentleman, whose patronymic is SAWBRIDGE, s. to the estates in right of his wife, upon the demise of that lady's brother, Richard-Edward Erle-Drax, Esq., 13 Aug. 1828, and assumed, in consequence, the surnames and arms of ERLE-DRAX. He is captain in the East Kent militia, and captain-commandant of the Charborough yeomanry cavalry.

Lineage.

The Erles are of ancient and knightly descent. The first ancestor that occurs in the pedigree is Henry de Erle, Lord of Newton, in Somersetshire, 35th HENRY III., but the family was long previously settled in that county. So far back as the 7th HENRY II., John de Erlegh paid five marks for the scutage of his lands at Beckington, in Somersetshire.

The descendant of a branch of this ancient line,

WALTER ERLE, Esq.‡ (son of John Erle, of Culhampton, in Devon, by Thomasine, dau. of Beare, of Somersetshire, and grandson of John Erle, of Culhampton, who was son of John, the second son of John Erle, of Ashburton, in Devon,) became possessed of Charborough, co. Dorset, by his marriage with Margery, dau. and co-heir of Richard Wikes, of Charborough, who had inherited Charborough from the family of Camel of Shakwycke and Charborough. Walter Erle d. in 1581, leaving (with a dau, Honor, m. to John Giffard, Esq. of Brightley) a son and heir,

THOMAS ERLE, Esq. of Charborough, who m. Dorothy,

dau. of William Pole, Esq. of Columpton, co. Devon, and by her, who m. 2ndly, Sir Walter Vaughan, Knt., left at his decease, 16 March, 1597, a son and successor,

SIR WALTER ERLE, of Charborough, who received the honour of knighthood in 1616, and, in 1641, was one of the managers against the Earl of Strafford at his trial. On the breaking out of the Civil Wars he sided with the parliament, and the active part he bore in those unhappy times may be seen in Rushworth and Whitlock. He was governor of Dorchester, and lieutenant of the Ordnance, in which latter appointment he succeeded Mr. Pym, in 1643. In 1645, he deciphered some important letters which had been intercepted, and received for this service the thanks of the House of Commons. In 1646, he was one of the four commissioners to the King for peace; and, in 1647, a commission passed for him to be master of the Ordnance. Sir Walter, together with Mr. Hollis, and other Ephori (as Lord Clarendon styles them), and 7000 foot, 800 horse, and four pieces of cannon, came from Wells to Sherbourne, to oppose the Marquis of Hertford. On the approach of the Earl of Caernarvon, he raised the siege of Corfe Castle. Sir Walter m. Anne, dau. and heir of Francis Dymoke, and sister of Sir Henry Dymoke, Knt., and with her acquired the manors of Erckington and Pipe, co. Warwick, which he sold, 1st CHARLES I., to Sir Walter Devereux, Bart. By this lady, who d. in 1665, he had issue,

THOMAS, aged two, in 1623, who m. Susanna, fourth dau. of William Fiennes, third Viscount Say and Sele, and by her, who m. 2ndly, Robert Hawley, Esq., left at his decease, which occurred during the lifetime of his father, two sons and two daus. The former were, Walter, who m. Anne, dau. of Thomas Trenchard, Esq.; and THOMAS, of whom presently, as successor to his grandfather.

Anne, m. to Norton of Hampshire.

Sir Walter d. in 1665, and his son having predeceased him, the estates eventually devolved on his grandson,

GENERAL THOMAS ERLE, of Charborough, a military officer of high reputation, who commanded in Ireland and Flanders in the wars of King WILLIAM and Queen ANNE. In 1714, he was appointed lieut.-general of the Ordnance, governor of Portsmouth and Southsea Castle; and, in 1716, made general of foot. He was likewise a privy councillor to Queen ANNE and GEORGE I. General Erle commanded, as lieutenant-general, the centre of the army at the battle of Almanza, in 1709, as the Earl of Galway did the left wing, and lost his right hand in the engagement. This gallant officer m. Elizabeth, second dau. of Sir William Wyndham, Bart. of Orchard Wyndham, in Somersetshire, and dying in 1720, left an only dau. and heir,

FRANCES ERLE, of Charborough, who m. Sir Edward Ernle, Bart. of Maddington, co. Wilts, M.P. for Wareham (see BURKE'S Extinct Baronetage), and dying in 1728, left an only dau. and heir,

ELIZABETH ERNLE, of Charborough, who m. HENRY DRAX,* Esq. of Ellerton Abbey, in Yorkshire, M.P. for Lyme Regis and Wareham, and secretary to Frederick, Prince of Wales, and by him, who d. in 1755, the heiress of Ernle and Erle left, at her decease, in 1759, (with five daus., Elizabeth, m. 1st, to Augustus, 4th Earl Berkeley, and 2ndly, to Robert, Viscount Clare; Mary, m. to John Durbin, Esq.; Harriot, m. to Sir William Hanham, Bart.; Susannah, m. 1st, to William Calcraft, Esq., and 2ndly, to John, Earl of Castlehaven; and Frances, who d. in 1751) three sons, of whom the eldest,

THOMAS ERLE-DRAX, Esq. of Charborough, m. Mary, dau. of Lord St. John of Bletshoe, but d. without issue, in 1790, aged sixty-seven, when he was s. by his brother,

EDWARD DRAX, Esq. of Charborough, who m. 16 April, 1762, Mary, dau. of Awnsham Churchill, Esq. of Henbury, and had an only dau. and heiress,

SARAH-FRANCES DRAX, of Charborough, who m. 11 March, 1788, Richard Grosvenor, Esq., M.P. for West Looe, nephew of Richard, Earl Grosvenor, and that gentleman assumed, in consequence of his marriage, the surname and arms of ERLE-DRAX. The issue were one son and a dau., viz.,

RICHARD-EDWARD, the heir.
JANE-FRANCES, successor to her brother.

Mr. Erle-Drax Grosvenor d. 8 Feb. 1819, aged fifty-eight, and his widow (the heiress of Charborough,) on 15 June, 1822. They were s. by their only son,

RICHARD-EDWARD ERLE-DRAX, Esq. of Charborough and Ellerton Abbey, d. unm. 13 Aug. 1828, and was s. by his sister,

JANE-FRANCES ERLE-DRAX, who had m. in the previous year, JOHN-SAMUEL-WANLEY SAWBRIDGE, Esq., and that gentleman having assumed the surname and arms of ERLE-DRAX, is the present possessor of CHARBOROUGH PARK, &c.

Arms—Quarterly: 1st, DRAX and ERLE, quarterly; quartering SAWBRIDGE. (See BURKE'S General Armory.)
Crests—1st, DRAX; 2nd, SAWBRIDGE. (See BURKE'S General Armory.)
Seats—Charborough Park, Wareham; and Ellerton Abbey, Yorkshire.

* The family of Drax appears to have been anciently seated in the county of York. In 1647, Colonel Drax, Col. Modiford, Colonel Walrond, and other cavaliers, having converted their estates into money, and not being able to reside in England under the usurpation, retired to Barbadoes, where Colonel Drax acquired, in a few years, an estate of £8000 or £9000 per annum, and married the daughter of the Earl of Carlisle, then proprietor of the island.

Lineage.

"The Dundasses," says Lord Woodhouselee, in the Transactions of the Royal Society, "are descended of a family to which the historian and the genealogist have assigned an origin of high antiquity and splendour, but which has been still more remarkable for producing a series of men eminently distinguished for their public services in the highest offices in Scotland. If the pride of ancestry is ever allowable, it is where those ancestors have adorned the stations which they filled by that genuine merit, which, independently of rank, must have entitled them to the respect and esteem of their fellow-citizens."

The Dundasses are generally believed to have sprung from the Dunbars, Earls of March, who derived themselves from the Saxon Princes of England.

Cospatric, 1st Earl of March, d. in 1139, leaving two sons, viz. Cospatric, the second earl, and Uthred, living in the time of David I., who obtained from Waldeve, his father's elder brother, the lands and barony of Dundas, in West Lothian. His son,

Helias, had a confirmation of the lands of Dundas, in the reign of King David, and assumed therefrom, in conformity with the then prevailing custom, his name and designation, while to denote his alliance with the old Earls of March, he adopted for his armorial bearings the ensigns of those lords, differing, as a mark of cadency, in the colours only. He was s. in the beginning of the reign of William the Lion, by his son,

Serle de Dundas, who is frequently mentioned in the affairs of Scotland, temp. King William. He d. early in the next reign, and from him we pass over six generations, amongst the chiefs of which we find staunch adherents of Wallace and Bruce, to his descendant,

John de Dundas, who obtained from David II. a charter, dated 18 Feb. 1364, of the lands and barony of Fingask. He left at his decease, a dau., Agnes, m. to Sir Adam Forrester, of Corstorphin, and a son,

James Dundas, of Dundas, whose name occurs in numerous charters, from 1378 to 1439. His first wife's name is not recorded, but by her he had three sons, James, and Archibald, both knights, and successive proprietors of

Dundas; and Duncan, Lord Lyon, founder of the Dundases of Newliston. The Laird's 2nd wife was Christian Stewart, dau. of John, Lord Innermeath and Lorn, and by her he was father of Alexander, founder of the Dundasses of Fingask; of another son, who d. s. p., and of two daus. He d. in 1430-1, and was s. by his eldest son,

JAMES DUNDAS, of Dundas, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Alexander Levingston, of Callender, governor of Scotland, in the minority of JAMES II., and subsequently espousing the interests of his father-in-law, he was committed prisoner to the Castle of Dumbarton, with his brother Duncan, when his lands were confiscated. He d. issueless, before the year 1452, and was s. by his brother,

SIR ARCHIBALD DUNDAS, of Dundas. This laird obtained charters from King JAMES III. of the lands and barony of Bothkener, and of the lands and barony of Blairmucks. He was high in favour at Court, and had several confidential embassies entrusted to him. Some short period before the king's decease, Dundas received a letter from his Majesty, announcing the Royal intention of conferring upon him the Earldom of Forth, but the monarch's unexpected death in battle prevented the fulfilment of the promise. He obtained, however, from JAMES IV., in 1491, a grant of the island of Inchgarvie, with liberty to build and fortify a castle thereon, with numerous and important privileges attached. He d. within a short time afterwards, and was s. by his son,

SIR WILLIAM DUNDAS, of Dundas, who was served heir to his father in 1494. He m. Margaret, dau. of Archibald Wauchope, of Niddery, and had two sons, SIR JAMES, his heir; and William, ancestor of the Dundases of Dudingston, &c. The elder son,

SIR JAMES DUNDAS, of Dundas, had seisin of his estate 2 Oct. 1513. He m. Margaret Sandilands, of the house of Torphichen, and dying in 1553, left a son and heir,

GEORGE DUNDAS, of Dundas, who m. 1st, Margaret, dau. of David Boswell, of Balmuto, and had two sons, WALTER (Sir), and George. He m. 2ndly, Catharine, dau. of Laurence, 3rd Lord Oliphant, and had by her,

III. JAMES (Sir), of Arniston (see that family).
IV. ROBERT, who is mentioned in a charter under the great seal, dated 8 April, 1565.

The Laird of Dundas obtained a charter of the lands of Easter Bavelaw, in the county of Edinburgh, dated in 1580, and dying soon after, was s. by his eldest son,

SIR WALTER DUNDAS, of Dundas, knighted at the baptism of Prince Henry, who m. Janet, dau. of Sir Alexander Oliphant, of Kelly, and by her had daus. only. He m. 2ndly, Anne, dau. of Monteith, of Carse, and had GEORGE, his heir; William, ancestor of the Dundases of Blair; Walter, of the Dundases of Magdalens, now settled in Ireland; Alexander; Hugh; and Marian, wife of Blair, of that ilk. He d. about the year 1634, and was s. by his eldest son,

GEORGE DUNDAS, of Dundas, who was served heir in 1636. This laird espoused the cause of the parliament in the Civil Wars. In 1641, he was on the committee for the trial of the gallant Montrose and his adherents, and he was subsequently one of the Colonels in Linlithgowshire for putting the kingdom into a state of defence. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Alexander Hamilton, of Innerwick, and had (with three daus.) WALTER, his heir; George, who m. Margaret, dau. of Hay, of Monkton, and had, with other issue, GEORGE, who eventually inherited the Chieftainship and estates; and James, ancestor of the present Robert Dundas, Esq. The laird lived several years after the Revolution, and was s. at his decease by his eldest son,

WALTER DUNDAS, Esq. of Dundas, who m. the Lady Christian Leslie, dau. of Alexander, first Earl of Leven, and had, RALPH; Walter, who d. s. p.; Agnes, wife of Sir John Foulis; Mary, of Sir Wm. Lockhart; and Barbara, of Alexander, Lord Raith. Dundas was s. by his elder son,

RALPH DUNDAS, Esq. of Dundas, living in 1669, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of William Sharp, Esq. of Houston, and had two sons, Thomas and William, who both died without issue, and thus terminated the male line of WALTER, eldest son of GEORGE DUNDAS, of Dundas, served heir in 1636; the Chieftainship of the family devolved in consequence upon the grandson of the said George Dundas (the son of his second son, George),

GEORGE DUNDAS, Esq., M.P. for Linlithgowshire, and Master of the King's works of Scotland. He m. Alison dau. of General James Bruce, of Kennet, and was s. by his eldest son,

JAMES DUNDAS, Esq. of Dundas, who m. Jean-Maria, eldest dau. of William, Lord Forbes, and had (with four daus., Dorothea, wife of George Brown, Esq. of Elliston, co. Roxburgh; Alice, of Sir John Wedderburn; Barbara, of George Ogilvie, of Langly Park; and Elizabeth) an only son, his successor,

EDGEWORTH OF EDGEWORTHSTOWN.

EDGEWORTH, CHARLES-SNEYD, Esq. of Edgeworthstown, co. Longford, b. 30 Oct. 1786; m. 2 Sept. 1813, Henrica, dau. of John Broadhurst, Esq. of Foston, co. Derby.

Lineage.

The Edgeworths, originally, it is said, established at Edgeworth, now called Edgeware, in Middlesex, settled in Ireland in the reign of ELIZABETH, about the year 1583.

ROGER EDGEWORTH, a monk, who wrote a sermon against the Reformers, being smitten, like his master HENRY VIII., with the bright eyes of beauty, like him, after having been a defender of the Catholic faith, renounced it, and married. His sons, Edward and Francis, went to Ireland, probably under the patronage of Essex and Cecil, as those names have since continued in the family. The elder son,

THE RIGHT REV. EDWARD EDGEWORTH, who was beneficed by Queen ELIZABETH, became Bishop of Down and Connor in 1593. He d. without issue, and was s. by his brother,

FRANCIS EDGEWORTH, Clerk of the Hanaper in 1619, who m. Jane, dau. of Sir Edmond Tuite, Knt. of Sonna, in Westmeath, and had by her (who founded a religious house in Dublin) a son and heir,

CAPTAIN JOHN EDGEWORTH, of Cranallagh Castle, in the co. of Longford, who m. 1st, the dau. of Sir Hugh Cullum, of Derbyshire, by whom he had a son, John, his heir, and 2ndly, Mrs. Bridgman, widow of Edward Bridgman, Esq., brother to Sir Orlando Bridgman, the lord keeper, and went back with her to Ireland. He was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN EDGEWORTH, knighted by CHARLES II., who m. the only dau. and heir of Edward Bridgman, Esq., acquired with her an estate in Lancashire, besides a considerable fortune in money, and had eight sons, of whom the eldest, FRANCIS, s. to the paternal estate in Longford; the second, Robert, was ancestor of the EDGEWORTHS of KILSHREWLY; and the fifth, Essex, had a son, the celebrated Abbé Edgeworth, who styled himself, from the estate his branch of the family possessed, Monsieur de Firmont. The eldest,

COL. FRANCIS EDGEWORTH, of Edgeworthstown, raised a regiment for WILLIAM III., and became so zealous a loyalist, as to acquire the nickname of "Protestant Frank." He m. successively several wives, one of whom, an English lady, was a widow Bradstone, who by her first husband had a dau., Miss Bradstone, wife of Mr. Pakenham, and mother of the first Lord Longford. By this lady Col. Edgeworth left a son and successor,

RICHARD EDGEWORTH, Esq. of Edgeworthstown, under the guardianship of Mr. Pakenham, who advised him to go to the Temple at eighteen, instead of going to college, This prudent counsel Mr. Edgeworth followed, and by application to business, and by making himself master of his own affairs, he recovered a considerable part of his estate which had been unjustly detained from him by some of his own family. Mr. Edgeworth m. in 1732, Rachel-Jane, dau. of Samuel Lovell, Esq., a Welsh judge, son of Sir Salathiel Lovell, Knt. of Harleston, in the co. of Northampton, one of the barons of the Exchequer, and had to survive childhood, two sons and two daus., viz.,

In 1839, having become male representative of the family, he petitioned the crown that his right to the Viscountcy of Baltinglass might be acknowledged: his petition was referred to the Attorney-General for Ireland, who, having investigated the Case, made a report thereon to Government, concluding thus:—

"I am of opinion that the petitioner has shewn sufficient evidence of his right to the said dignity of Viscount of Baltinglass, in case the attainder* of James, the third viscount, created by the act of Queen Elizabeth, were reversed."

Lineage.

The family of Eustace, of ancient Norman descent, was established in Ireland by one of the companions in arms of Henry II., by whom he was appointed governor of the county of Kildare. His descendant,

Sir Rowland Eustace, Knt. of Harristown, Lord Treasurer of Ireland, son of Sir Edward Eustace, Knt., Lord Deputy of Ireland to Richard, Duke of York, was created Baron Portlester, in Meath, in 1454. He d. in 1496, and was s. by his nephew,

Sir Thomas Eustace, Knt. of Harristown, created Baron of Kilcullen, co. Kildare, in 1541, and Viscount of Baltinglass, co. Wicklow, in 1542. His lordship made a settlement of all his estates upon the marriage of his son, Sir Rowland Eustace, second Viscount, with Joan, dau. of James, Lord Dunboyne. The elder son of this marriage, James Eustace, 3rd Viscount Baltinglass, having rebelled against the authority of Queen Elizabeth, in 1583, by refusing to pay taxes unauthorized by the legislature, was attainted by an act of the Parliament held in Ireland under the government of Sir John Perrott, in 1586, when the immense estates of the family were confiscated, and the title has since remained dormant. His lordship's brother, and eventual heir, the Hon. William Eustace, (who had not been engaged in the rebellion,) on the departure of Lord Baltinglass for Spain, retired with his family to England, and, in consequence of the edict of pardon and oblivion, published by King James on his accession, together with the confirmatory acts of parliament of that and the subsequent reign, is recorded in the Heralds' College, London, as living as Viscount Baltinglass, in 1610. His only son, by Margaret, his wife, dau. of Ashe, of Great Forenass, co. Kildare, Rowland Eustace, m. Elizabeth Bigland, a Yorkshire lady, dau. of Mary Strickland, of

Lineage.

"The representative of this ancient family," saith Douglas, in the Baronage, "is the head or chief of the powerful and numerous clan FARQUHARSON. They had large possessions in the Braes of Mar, (the head of Aberdeenshire,) and the adjacent countries. They also, like other great highland families, had their bards and senachies, who faithfully handed down their brave actions; and it is agreed by all our historians, that they were a race of valiant and warlike people, steady in their loyalty to their king, and always ready to fight in defence of the liberties of their country." The house of Invercauld derives its descent from

SHAW MC DUFF, (sprung from a younger son of the potent Thanes of Fife,) who had a son called FARQUHAR, who settled in Mar, in the reign of ROBERT II. (1371,) and was made bailie and chamberlain thereof: his sons, as was customary in that early period, obtaining the surname of FARQUHARSONS, sons of Farquhar, founded many opulent and puissant houses in Scotland. The eldest,

FARQUHAR FARQUHARSON, who m. a dau. of Chisholm, of Straglash, and had (with junior issue, which settled in the braes of Angus, and founded several families of Farquharson) a son and successor,

DONALD FARQUHARSON, who, in consideration of the eminent services he had rendered to the crown, obtained considerable additions to his inheritance. He m. a dau. of Duncan Stewart, of the family of Mar, and had a son and heir, FINDLA, commonly called FINDLA MORE, from his gigantic size and great strength, a man of daring courage and of a bold and determined character. "His descendants in the highlands were called (according to Douglas) Clan Ianla, and the head of the family Mack Ianla, though before this period they were called, in the Gaelic language, Clan Erachar, and most of the branches were called Mackerachars, and several of them still retain that name. In like manner, some of the descendants of Findla (settling in the lowlands, with the designation of Mack Ianla) had it afterwards converted into the name of Findlayson." Findla m. 1st, Beatrix, dau. of George Garden, of that ilk, and had (with a younger son, who founded the houses of Farquharson of Whitehouse, (see that name,) of FINZEAN, now represented by ARCHIBALD FARQUHARSON, Esq. &c.) a son and heir, ROBERT. He m. 2ndly, a dau. of the Baron Roy, of Kincardin Stewart, and had other children, seated in Perthshire. ### Lineage.

This family descends from the ancient and once powerful house of CUMMING of ALTYRE, having branched, according to numerous records extant, from the parent stock about the year 1460. It also derives from the Ogilvies, Earls of Findlater, whose ancestor was brother of the oldest earl in Great Britain, and brother-in-law of WILLIAM THE LION, having married that monarch's sister. The patent of the Earl of Angus bears date 1037, and he is still lineally represented by DAVID OGILVIE, EARL OF AIRLIE. (See BURKE'S Peerage.)

ALEXANDER CUMMING, of Altyre, m. Janet, dau. of Sir William Fraser, of Philorth, (progenitor of the Lords Saltoun,) and had two sons, SIR THOMAS CUMMING, his heir; and FERQUHARD, ancestor of the Cummings of Kellas, &c. co. Moray, who, disobliged at the refusal of their chief to allow them to bury their dead in the family burial-place, and from other feuds common at that time, laid aside the surname of CUMMING, and adopted that of FARQUHARSON, as descendants of Ferquhard, from whom have sprung the FARQUHARSONS of Haughton and Balfling, in Aberdeenshire. This family of Farquharson possessed Kellas &c. for many generations, and became allied, by marriage, to many of the best Northern houses, the Grants, Inneses, &c. The fourth, in direct male descent, from Ferquhard, WILLIAM FARQUHARSON, alias CUMMING of Kellas, m. about the year 1580, Jean, third dau. of John, grandson of FINLAY MORE, (progenitor of the clan FARQUHARSON,) by his second wife, a dau. of Baron Roy, of Kincardine Stewart, and had issue, who carried on the line. He was one of the barons of the North who signed a roll for the protection of JAMES VI. after the Gowry conspiracy.

During the civil wars, the FARQUHARSONS of Kellas followed King CHARLES I. to York, shared in his fortunes, lost their estate, were all but one killed in battle, and lie in the cathedral at Durham. The survivor,

JOHN FARQUHARSON, returned to Scotland, took up his abode in Monymusk, Aberdeenshire, and purchased the estate of HAUGHTON. He m. in 1656, a dau. of Donald Farquharson, Esq., fifth son of Invercauld, and left a son and successor, male descendant of Ogilvie of Findlater and Deskford, prior to its elevation to the peerage as Baron Deskford and Earl of Findlater,) and had issue,

FARSYDE OF FYLINGDALES.

FARSYDE-WATSON, GEORGE-JAMES, Esq. of Fylingdales, co. York, a barrister-at-law practising on the Northern circuit, assumed the additional surname of FARSYDE in 1825, on succeeding to the remains of the family property in Fylingdales under the will of his paternal uncle, Watson Farsyde, Esq.

Lineage.

This is an ancient Scotch and Yorkshire family, deriving its name from the castle, lands, and villages of Easter and Wester Fawsyde, near Tranent, in East Lothian. The Fawsydes were seated at Fawsyde as early as 1253, when we find ALLAN DE FAWSYDE gives an obligation to pay yearly out of his lands to the monks of Dunfermline quinque solidos argenti; in 1292, ROBERTUS DE FAWSYDE swears fealty to EDWARD I. of England, for his lands of Fawsyde; in 1335, WILLIAM DE FAWSYDE, together with William de Lorreyne, has a pardon from EDWARD III. of England, for sundry raids and forays, murders, felonies, &c., committed in border warfare; in 1356, THOMAS DE FAWSYDE, miles, has two safe-conducts by EDWARD III. from Scotland into England, to treat concerning the liberation of David Bruce, then prisoner. From this period frequent and honourable mention is made of this family in Scottish record. They were summoned to Parliament; a Fawsyde fell on Flodden field with JAMES V. They were returned with the families of Malcolm Fleming, Earl of Wigton, and the Swintons of that ilk, and continued to hold the lands and castle of Forsyde until the year 1614, when we find that those possessions passed by marriage out of the family into that of Douglas, Marquess of Queensbury. This is thus described in Douglas's Peerage of Scotland: "The Hon. William Douglas, of Kilhead, second son of the first Earl of Queensbury, m. 1st, Agnes Fawsyde, dau. and heiress of Fawsyde, of Fawsyde, a gentleman of an ancient family that had been seated four centuries at Fawsyde Castle, in the parish of Tranent, co. Haddington, by whom he had issue, &c. &c."

Prior to the marriage with Douglas, John Farsyde, or Fawsyde, a scion of this family, had come into England, either with King JAMES I. or a short time previously, and was made Bow-Bearer and Warden of Pickering Forest, and had a lease of crown lands in Scalby and Hutton Bushell, and other places in Pickering Lythe, N. R. co. York, by King JAMES. From this person the Farsydes of Fylingdales and the Farsyde-Watsons of Bilton Park are lineally descended, as shewn in the pedigree preserved in the College of Arms. The father of the present male representative,

JOHN FARSYDE, Esq. of Bilton Park, co. York, J.P., son of JOHN FARSYDE, Esq. of Fylingdales, by Mary, his wife, dau. of John Watson, Esq. assumed the surname of WATSON, in lieu of his patronymic. He m. Hannah, dau. of the Rev. James Hartley, of Stavely, W. R. co. York, and d. in 1810, leaving issue,

FERGUSSON OF CRAIGDARROCH AND ORROLAND.

FERGUSSON, ROBERT, Esq. of Craigdarroch, co. Dumfries, and of Orroland, in the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, s. his father, the late Right Hon. Robert Cutlar Fergusson, 16 Nov. 1838.

Lineage.

The Fergussons of Craigdarroch,

"A line that has struggled for freedom with Bruce,"

are of very ancient standing in the Sheriffdom of Dumfries, and the name is familiar to all who are acquainted with the minute history of Scotland. A Fergusson of Craigdarroch was one of the first that signed the solemn league and covenant; another headed a small handful of men who defeated a portion of Cromwell's army at Glencairn, 1500 strong, in 1651; and a third fell at the battle of Killicrankie.

The first charter that is extant among the family muniments was granted by John, of Crawford, son of the Laird of Dalgernock, to JOHN FERGUSSON, Dominus de Craigdarroch, his cousin, "pro suo consilio et auxilio," of the Mill of Balmacannie, in Jedburgh. This charter is without date, but from the names of the witnesses, Sir John Stewart, Laird of Dalswinton, and his three sons, it must have been executed early in the fourteenth century. From JOHN FERGUSSON, of Craigdarroch, son and heir of Matthew Fergusson, of Craigdarroch, living in 1484, lineally derived

ALEXANDER FERGUSSON, Esq. of Craigdarroch, chosen M.P. in 1717, who m. Anne, dau. of Sir Robert Laurie, of Maxweltoun, by Jean Riddell, his wife, and had (with a dau., Jean, m. in 1731, to Robert Riddell, Esq. of Glen Riddell,) two sons, JAMES and ROBERT, from one of whom derived the late

RIGHT HON. ROBERT-CUTLAR FERGUSSON, Esq. of Craigdarroch, son of Alexander Fergusson, Esq. of Craigdarroch, a distinguished Scottish advocate, the hero of Burns' song of "The Whistle." Mr. Cutlar Fergusson, who was born in 1769, the representative of two very ancient houses, the FERGUSSONS of Craigdarroch and the CUTLARS of Orroland, was called to the English bar in 1797, and for about twenty years practised with brilliant success at Calcutta. Mrs. Ferrand assumed in 1837, by sign-manual, her paternal name and arms of Ferrand, in compliance with the testamentary injunction of her relative, Benjamin Ferrand, Esq., in consequence of succeeding, by the death of her brother, without male issue, to his estates. Her three younger daus., then unm., took at the same time the name of Ferrand, in addition to that of Busfeild.

Lineage.

The name of Ferrand, or Ferrant, was imported at a very early period into the Deanery of Craven, in Yorkshire, from Normandy, where it is still to be met with, and the family that it in this country designated, lived as retainers to the great house of De Fortibus, Earls of Albemarle, and afterwards attached itself to that of Clifford, Earls of Cumberland.

From William de Fortibus, Earl of Albemarle, Hugh Ferrand, in the thirteenth century, had a deed of grant to himself and his heirs of the office of wardour of Skipton Castle.*

Four different families of Ferrand, which proceeded from this common stock, are mentioned in the Yorkshire Visitations—the families of Carlton Hall, of Fleshby, of Westhall, and of Harden Grange. The three former, who in the early part of the seventeenth century had allied themselves by marriage to many houses of consideration, as the Tempests, the Blenkinsops, the Hebers, the Townleys, and the Percys, have now long parted with their original possessions. The last alone remains in its ancient seat.

In Dugdale's Visitation of the county of York, Christopher Ferrand, of Bingley, in Craven, is the first name of the existing line mentioned. He had several children, one of whom, Robert Ferrand, of Bingley, mentions in his will, dated 18 April, 1591, and proved at York 20 Dec. 1593, that his mother's name was Alice, makes a bequest to Ephane Birwaine, his sister, and to Margaret, his wife, and appoints Richard Ferrand, his brother, his executor. This Richard Ferrand, who was also of Bingley, and was another son of Christopher Ferrand, left issue by his wife, Margaret, dau. of Henry Atkinson, of Boland,

FERRERS OF BADDESLEY CLINTON.

FERRERS, MARMION-EDWARD, Esq. of Baddesley Clinton, co. Warwick, b. 13 Oct. 1813; inherited the estates and representation of this the only remaining male branch of the once potent name of Ferrers, upon the demise of his father, 10 Aug. 1830.

Lineage.

This ancient Family, than which few can claim a higher or more illustrious descent, derives from Walchelin, a Norman, whose son, HENRY FERRERS, assumed the name from Ferriers, a small town of Gastinois, in France, otherwise called Ferrieres, from the iron mines with which that country abounded, and in allusion to the circumstance, he bore for his arms "six horses' shoes," either from the similitude of his cognomen to the French Ferrier, or because the seigneurie produced iron, so essential to the soldier and cavalier in those rude times, when war was esteemed the chief business of life, and the adroit management of the steed, even amongst the nobility, the first of accomplishments. Henry de Ferrers came into England with the CONQUEROR, and obtained a grant of Tutbury Castle, co. Stafford. By Bertha, his wife, he had a son and heir,

ROBERT DE FERRERS, who having contributed, at the head of the Derbyshire men, to King STEPHEN'S victory over DAVID of Scotland, at Northallerton, was created by that monarch EARL OF DERBY. He was grandfather of,

FFARINGTON OF WORDEN.

FFARINGTON, JAMES-NOWELL, Esq. of Worden, co. Lancaster, a Magistrate and Deputy-lieutenant, s. his father 13 June, 1837.

Lineage.

The FFARINGTONS, of Ffarington, Worden, and Shawe Hall, all in the parish of Leyland, and county palatine of Lancaster, arose at the time of the Conquest, and have since preserved an uninterrupted male succession. They resided at Ffaringtou so recently as the time of ELIZABETH, and continued at Worden until the close of the sixteenth century, when they removed to Shawe Hall. Of the mansion of Worden a portion remains, and the ancient outbuildings are remarkable for retaining still in fine preservation the family arms carved on the ends of their projecting beams of oak.

WARIN BUSSEL, seated at Penwortham, one of the Barons under Roger de Poictou, in the time of the CONQUEROR, held, among his ample demesnes, the parish of Leyland, and was a considerable benefactor to the Abbey of Evesham, in Worcestershire, to which he gave the Priory of Penwortham. His son,

WARIN BUSSEL, was father of

ROBERT BUSSEL, whose dau. AVICIA BUSSEL, m. in the 14th HENRY III. (1230), JOHN DE FFARINGTON, grandson of W. de Meles, Corredor of the church of Leyland, and son of Richard de Ffarington, of Hogwic. From this Avis and John de Ffarington, lineally derived (eleventh in descent)

He m. Cecilie Tunstall, and had two sons and one dau. The second son, Henry, was ancestor of the FARINGTONS of Chichester, of whom was SIR RICHARD FARINGTON, created a Baronet in 1697. He m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Sir Alexander Ratcliffe, by whom he had issue; and 2ndly, Dorothy, dau. of Sir — Okeover, of Okeover, in Staffordshire, by whom he left, at his decease, (his will is dated 1549,) a son,

FLOOD OF PAULSTOWN CASTLE.

Flood, William, Esq. of Paulstown Castle, co. Kilkenny, s. to the estates upon the demise of his father.

Lineage.

Few among the Anglo-Saxon families have a higher claim to distinction than that of Flood, not only from antiquity of descent, but from the distinguished abilities and patriotic conduct of several of its members, both in England and in Ireland.

In the History of Kent there is a very elaborate account given of the Fludds, as the name was then written; and we find the ancient Chroniclers designating them "A knightly family." Certainly Sir Thomas Flod, or Fludd, (for Lord Burleigh, in his dispatches, uses the former orthography, while the old chroniclers use the latter,) was highly distinguished for his chivalry when serving under Lord Willoughby, who was sent with a considerable force to the aid of Henry IV. of France.

Sir Thomas Flood was not only complimented by that monarch, but received the investiture of a military order of knighthood, on his return to England, from Queen Elizabeth. Her Majesty made him Treasurer to all her Majesty's forces in the Low Countries. He was afterwards Receiver-General of Kent, Sussex, and Surrey, Treasurer of the Cinque Ports, with other distinctions. On the death of Sir Thomas, his son s. to the estates in Kent. Thomas, who now inherited Milgate, was particularly honoured and favoured by James I.; and Hasted, the historian of Kent, says, that from Thomas Flood's learning he was in high favour with the king, who ultimately conferred divers grants of lands on him. His brother Robert was a philosopher of the school of Paracelsus; he wrote much in the Latin language; his doctrines were confuted by Leibnitz, at least those entitled "A System of the Universe." Robert took two degrees at Oxford, and was one of the most eminent of the learned men of Europe when he lived.

In following the lineage of the eldest son of Sir Thomas Flod, we arrive at the founder of the Irish branch,

Francis Flood, Esq. of Burnchurch, a major in the army, who commanded a body of horse in the personal army of the Protector Cromwell, and went to Ireland at the same period as the Ponsonbys, Cuffes, and Wardens, all of whom settled in co. The pedigree of this family is authentically deduced from FLOIERUS, who settled soon after the Norman Conquest on the lands beyond the River Exe, co. Devon, whence the name of "Floierslands," or Floiers Hayes. His son,

FORBES, ARTHUR, Esq. of Culloden House, in the shire of Inverness, b. 25 Jan. 1819; s. his father, 28 Nov. 1840.

Lineage.

The Founder of this distinguished family was DUNCAN FORBES, (the great-grandfather of the Lord President Forbes,) a member of parliament and provost of Inverness. He was descended from the family of Lord Forbes, through that of Tolquhon, and by the mother's side, from that of Keith, Earl Marischall, (as a narrative in the hand-writing of the President's father informs us.) He purchased the barony of Culloden from the Laird of Mackintosh in 1626. Duncan had two brothers, JOHN, whose son Malcolm became Marquis of Montilly, in France; and PATRICK, (commonly called Black Patrick, bailie of Inverurie,) from whom descended the family of Forbes, of Foveran. Duncan Forbes d. 14 Oct. 1654, aged eighty-two. By his marriage with Janet, eldest dau. of James Forbes, of Corsinday, (a family also descended from that of Lord Forbes,) Duncan had, with two daus., Elizabeth, m. to William Baillie, of Duncan; and Anna, m. 1st, to Evan Macpherson, of Cluny, and 2ndly, to Alexander Mackintosh, of Connedge, three sons, JOHN, his heir; James (Capt.), of Caithness; and Duncan (Capt.), of Assynt. The eldest son,

JOHN FORBES, the second of Culloden, m. (contract dated 1643) Anna, eldest dau. of Alexander Dunbar, of Grange, by his first wife, Jean Campbell, dau. of Sir John Campbell, of Cawdor, (a family since raised to the Earldom of Cawdor,) and by the said Anna had six sons and two daus., viz., 1. DUNCAN, his heir; 2. David (Sir), of Newhall, one of the Judges of the Court of Session, an eminent lawyer and man of letters, an influential patron of Allan Ramsay; 3. Thomas; 4. Alexander, who went to New England; 5. Jonathan, M.D., of Elgin; 6. John (Lieut.-Col.), of Pitnacrieffe; 1. Jean, m. to Sir Robert Munro; and 2. Naomi, m. to Robert Dunbar, of Burgie. John Forbes was provost of Inverness, (we believe M.P. for the county,) and the friend and coadjutor of the Marquis of Argyll. He d. about the year of the Revolution, 1688, and was s. by his eldest son,

DUNCAN FORBES, the third of Culloden, who m. (contract dated 1668) Mary, dau. of Sir Robert Innes, of that ilk. By this lady he had two sons, JOHN, his heir, b. about the year 1672, and DUNCAN, afterwards lord president, and seven daus. The eldest, Jean, m. to Sir Harry Innes, of that ilk; the second, Anna, to Peter Forbes, of Phyline, in Assynt; the third, Mary, (contract dated 1698,) to Robert Urquhart, of Burdsyards; the fourth, Margaret, (contract dated 1699,) to George Munro, of Newmore; the fifth, Isobell, to Fraser, of Achnagairn; the sixth, Naomi, to Dr. Alexander Paterson, of Inverness; and the seventh, Grizell, (contract dated 21 April, 1709,) to David Ross, of Kindeace. Duncan Forbes latterly served in parliament for the co. of Nairn, and d. in 1704. He was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN FORBES, the fourth of Culloden, M.P. for Inverness-shire. He m. (contract dated 1699) Jean Gordon, dau. of Sir Robert Gordon, of Gordonstone, by Margaret, eldest dau. of William, Lord Forbes, and dying without issue, in the year 1734, was s. by the Lord Advocate of Scotland, his only brother,

THE RIGHT HONOURABLE DUNCAN FORBES, fifth laird of Culloden, the celebrated Lord President of the Court of Session, so distinguished in the great political events of his time, and so pre-eminently serviceable to government during the rising of '45. Of this ever memorable man the poet Thomson thus speaks:

> "Thee, Forbes, too, whom every worth attends,
> As truth sincere, as weeping friendship kind;
> Thee truly generous, and in silence great,
> Thy country feels through her reviving arts,
> Plann'd by thy wisdom, by thy soul inform'd;
> And seldom has she known a friend like thee."

Duncan Forbes, who was b. at Bunchrew, one of the family seats, near Inverness, 10 Nov. 1685, m. Mary, dau. of Hugh Rose, of the ancient family of Kilravock, in Nairnshire, and dying 10 Dec. 1747, was s. by his only child,

JOHN FORBES, Esq. of Culloden, the intimate friend of Thomson, Armstrong, and the other wits and literati of his day. He served with great distinction at the battles of Fontenoy and Culloden. At the former, his horse was shot under him. By economy and judicious management he succeeded in retrieving the fortunes of his family, which had received a severe and wellnigh fatal shock from the serious extent of his father the President's losses and advances, in the cause of government during the rebellion of 1745-6, losses and advances never suitably acknowledged in the proper quarter, an ingratitude still the wonder and reproach of the age. He m. 1st, Jane, dau. of Sir Arthur Forbes, Bart. of Craigievar, by whom he had two sons, Duncan, who d. in youth, and ARTHUR, his heir; and 2ndly, in 1772, Jane, dau. of Captain Forbes, of New, by whom (who m. afterwards, Grant, of Drumminner, Aberdeenshire) he had no issue. John Forbes d. 26 Sept. 1772, and was s. by his only surviving son,

ARTHUR FORBES, Esq. of Culloden, b. 15 Feb. 1760, who m. 1st, in 1779, Sarah, dau. and sole heir of Edward Stratton, Esq. of Kent, and of Ripley, in Surrey. By this lady, who d. at Culloden House, 19 Nov. 1793, aged thirty-six, he had one son and one dau., viz.

DUNCAN-GEORGE, his heir.

Sarah-Louisa, m. in 1798, to Hugh-Robert Duff, Esq. of Muirtown, Inverness-shire, and d. in 1829, leaving issue. Her only surviving son is Huntly-George-Gordon Duff, of Muirtown.

Mr. Forbes m. 2ndly, in 1800, Mary-Wardlaw Cumming, daughter of Admiral Sir William Cumming, but by that lady (who m. afterwards, Joseph Egerton, Esq. of Gray's Inn, and survives his widow) had no issue. He d. 26 May, 1803, and was s. by his only son,

DUNCAN-GEORGE FORBES, Esq. of Culloden House, b. 17 June, 1781, who m. 29 March, 1818, Sarah, only dau. of the late Joseph Walker, of Lancaster, Ash, and Satley, co. Durham, by Eliza, his wife, dau. of Edward Boys, Esq. of St. Albans, and by her, who d. in 1838, he had three sons, ARTHUR, now of Culloden; Duncan, b. 7 May, 1821; and Joseph-William Forbes, b. 3 Nov. 1827. Mr. Forbes d. 28 Nov. 1840.

Arms—Az., on a chev., between three bears' heads, couped, arg., muzzled, gu., as many unicorns' heads, erased, sa.
Crest—An eagle, displayed.
Motto—Salus per Christum, or Spernet humum.

FORBES OF TOLQUHON.

FORBES-LEITH, JAMES, Esq. of Whitehaugh, co. Aberdeen, b. in 1828, s. to the representation of the house of Tolquhon at the decease of his father.

Lineage.

Among the great families or clans which, in feudal times, comprehended the whole of the Scottish nation, and which a total change in the political constitution of the country has not yet been able entirely to break up, the house of Forbes held a conspicuous place. Ever constant to the royal standard, scarcely one of them returned from the disastrous field of Duplin; and a sacrifice not much less, when their services were called for at Pinkie, shewed that their loyalty was still undiminished. Among the gallant knights who accompanied their brave but rash monarch to Flodden, and fell around him, Le Seigneur de Forbes is found. To Lord Forbes, along with Argyll, was entrusted the suppression of the rebellion which Huntly headed in the North; and during the last century, the most efficient supporters of the house of Hanover were among the members of this house. "The Forbeses of Tolquhon have always," says Mr. Forbes of Culloden, "had the greatest respect, next to the chief and Pitsligo, because he was lord; not but that he was the elder brother; but the estate and dependants made tocher to be large and much looked upon." The numerous alliances with families of wealth and title correspond with this statement.

SIR JOHN FORBES (third son of Sir John Forbes of that ilk, justiciary and coroner of Aberdeenshire temp. ROBERT III., ancestor of the Lords Forbes) m. Marjorie, dau. of Henry Preston, Thane of Formartin, and thereby became Thane of Formartin and Laird of Tolquhon: by her he had three sons, I. He was made a burgess of Glasgow in 1685, and of St. Andrew's the same year. ## FOSBROOKE OF SHARDLOW AND RAVENSTONE.

FOSBROOKE, LEONARD, Esq. of Ravenstone Hall, co. Derby, Barrister-at-law, s. his father in 1830.

Lineage.

The FOSBROOKES, who are supposed to have derived their surname and origin from Fosbrooke, in Staffordshire, were settled at Cranford, in Northamptonshire, early in the reign of RICHARD II., where they acquired, and for several centuries possessed, considerable estates. These lands were alienated some time in the reign of CHARLES II., and about the same period the more immediate ancestors of this branch of the family settled at Shardlow, co. Derby.

JOHN FOSSEBROKE was seised of lands in Barton Seagrave, Raunds, and Cranford, and, as patron, presented to the living of Cranford in the year 1391. His widow, Margaret, also presented to the same living in 1403. They had a son,

JOHN FOSSEBROKE, who m. Maude, a lady of the noble house of Stafford, who was dry nurse to King HENRY VI., and left at his decease (5 HEN. VI., A.D. 1418) a son,

VIII., A.D. 1541, leaving a son, John, then only sixteen years of age. Through this son the Fosbrookes were continued at Cranford for four generations further, in the last of which, there being no son to inherit, but a family of seven daughters, (Harl. MS., No. 1553, fo. 38,) the estates were sold.

From HENRY FOSBROKE, the younger brother of the above-mentioned Richard, the Fosbrookes of Shardlow are descended. He settled in the town of Nottingham, and of that place was sheriff, in the 35 HEN. VIII., A.D. 1543-4, and afterwards mayor, first, in the 2nd ELIZ., A.D. 1559-60, and again in the 8 ELIZ., A.D 1565-6. (See the Leiger Book of the Corporation of Nottingham.)

In the year 1641, we find Leonard Fosbrooke and Robert Fosbrooke, of Nottingham, gentlemen, lessees, under the Earl of Huntingdon, of Wilne Ferry, on the river Trent, adjoining to the parish of Shardlow.

LEONARD FOSBROOKE, of Wilne Ferry, aforesaid, about the year 1670, purchased an estate at Shardlow, and, in the year 1684, erected the present Shardlow Hall. ### Lineage.

The family of Fowell is of very great antiquity, and claims Anglo-Saxon origin. The name, originally de Voghill, has been at different eras written Foghill, Fowghull, Fowhul, Fowhil, Fouhel, Fowle, Ffowell, Vowell, and Fowell; and the arms, registered in the College of Arms, with the date 1306, are stated, in the Devonshire roll, to have been visible in the windows of Totness, Brixton, and other churches in that shire. Numerous pedigrees of the ancient line of Fowell appear in the Visitations, from the earliest to the last; and on these documents, in addition to the family records, the following details, shewing an uninterrupted male descent for upwards of six centuries, are founded.

JOHN DE VOGHILL, son and heir of De Voghill, of Voghill, in the south of Devon, m. the dau. and eventual heir of Roger Bolter, of Batterscombe, in the parish of Ugborough, and is presumed to have thus acquired the adjoining estates of Fenton, Stone, Wydescombe, &c. Their son and heir,

ROGER DE FOGHILL, of Foghill, was father of

JOHN (or, according to some accounts, WILLIAM) DE FOGHILL, of Foghill, who m. the dau. and heir of Trevaze, of Trevaze, in Cornwall, by whom he acquired that manor and estate, and had (with a dau., Mabella, m. to William Fortescue, of Winston, ancestor of the EARLS FORTESCUE) a son and successor,

RICHARD FOWHILL, of Fowhill-Coome, living temp. EDWARD II., from which monarch he received a writ of summons, dated at Gloucester, 15 Feb. 1322, requiring him "to proceed in person to him, to perform what shall be enjoined him." He m. Maria, dau. of William Wallronde, of Bradfield, in Devon, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM FOWHILL, of Fowhill-Coome, who m. the dau. and heir of Halwell, or Halvell, of Devon, and had (with a dau. Sybilla, wife of William le Rouse, of Edmerstone, co. Devon—see family of ROUS) a son and successor,

JOHN FOWHILL, of Fowhill Coome, who m. Joane, dau. and co-heir of ——, of Harburtonford and Ashpreignton, near Totness, and is supposed to have thus acquired the manor of Harburtonford, with the mansion and estate of Higher Washbourne, in that parish. By her he had (with a dau., Katharine, m. to Richard Wood, alias Atwood, Esq. of Hareston, co. Devon) a son,

WILLIAM FOUHEL, of Fouhels-Coome, M.P. for Totness in the thirteenth parliament of HENRY VI., 1455. He m. Eleanor, youngest dau. of Sir Walter Reynell, Lord of Trumpington, by Margaret, his wife, eldest dau., and eventually sole heir (by Constance, his wife, dau. and co-heir of Robert de Malston) of William Strighul, of Devon, and, dying 23 March, 1507, left (with three daus., Katharine, m. to Thomas Coplestone, Esq. of Bowden; Margaret, m. to John Holbeam, Esq. of Holbeam, and Elizabeth, last Prioress of the Nunnery, Cannonsleigh, Devon) two sons, of whom the elder,

I. THOMAS, his heir.

I. Jane, m. to John Reynell, Esq. of Malston and East Oggwell, in Devon. (See family of REYNELL.)

II. Joan, m. twice; 1st, to Sir Philip Courtenay, Knt. of Loughtor, second son of Sir Philip Courtenay, Knt. of Molland, and great-grandson of Sir Philip Courtenay, Knt. of Powderham Castle. By her first, Joan had an only dau.,

Elizabeth Courtenay, who carried Loughtor in marriage to Sir William Strode, Knt. of Newenham Park, in Devon.

Joan Fowhell m. 2ndly, Humphry Prideaux, Esq. of Adeston and Thoughborough, in Devon, and had by him three sons and three daus.

III. Sibilla, one of the nuns of Cannonsleigh at the dissolution.

The son and successor,

THOMAS FOUHELL, Esq. of Fouhells-coome, m. 1st, Maria, eldest dau., by Joan, his wife, dau. and co-heir of Richard Whitby, Esq. of Efford, of Richard Halse, Esq. of Kenedon, in Devon, descendant and representative of Sir John Halse, Knt. of Kenedon, justice of the King's Bench, temp. HENRY VI.; (whose second son, John Halse, was Lord Bishop of Coventry and Lichfield; of both of whom PRINCE gives an account in his "Worthies;") 2ndly, Matilda, dau. of — Bevill, Esq. of Cornwall; and 3rdly, Jane, dau. of Nicholas Dillon, Esq. of Chimwell, in Devon, which last lady d. s. p. By his first wife, Thomas Fouhell had issue,

By his will, dated 4 Nov. 1691, he bequeathed, in conformity with the dying injunction of his grandfather, Sir Edmond, and the will of his father, Sir John, Fowellscombe Park, and the estates thereto annexed, to the heir male of the family, his kinsman, WILLIAM FOWELL, Esq. of Black Hall; but owing to an informality in the instrument, the testator's intentions were defeated, and the will set aside in favour of the last Baronet's sisters.

Mr. Deane-Freeman, a magistrate and deputy-lieut., s. his father, the late Joseph Deane-Freeman, Esq., 24 Jan. 1840.

Lineage.

The family of DEANE is an ancient one in Ireland, and has long possessed large estates in various parts of that kingdom. Previously it was of consideration in England, and held lands in the counties of Gloucester and Northampton. So early as the fifteenth century we find Dr. Deane, Archbishop of Canterbury, and other members of the family, receiving proofs of Royal favour, and acquiring, in Ireland, property of great extent and value. In the following century, Richard Deane was Bishop of Ossory, and at the same period, the estates which have descended in a direct and unbroken succession to the present Mr. Deane Freeman were possessed by his progenitors. During the civil wars in England, the family of Deane embraced the popular principles of the day, in a great measure impelled to that course by the influence and example of their English relations. Admiral Deane, a person of considerable influence, ability, and enterprise, joined with great zeal the anti-monarchical party in the House of Commons, to which he was returned for the county of Gloucester, was one of those who signed the death warrant of the unfortunate CHARLES, and shortly after lost his own life in the great action fought with Van Tromp. His influence decided the political course of his Irish kinsmen, and accordingly his cousin,

JOSEPH DEANE, Esq. of Cromlin, joined CROMWELL, and was appointed major of cavalry in the parliamentary army. His courage, sagacity, and fidelity, soon attracted the attention and engaged the confidence of his celebrated commander, from whom he received a confirmation of his original estates, besides grants of vast accessions to them in the counties of Dublin, Wexford, Kilkenny, Cork, and Waterford. Major Deane was the only son of Edward Deane, of Cromlin, and was b. 2 Feb. 1623; he m. 8 Feb. 1652, Elizabeth, dau. of Maurice Cuffe, Esq. of Quin, co. ### Lineage.

The Freres have flourished in the county of Suffolk, for many generations, in the rank of gentry, and can trace their descent, in direct line, from John Frere, of Thurston, who lived in the early part of the 14th century; the name is to be found in that county at least a hundred years previously, Henr. Le Frere being mentioned in the Rotuli de Oblatis finibus, in 1205; and it is certainly one of those cognomens which may be called personal, as distinguished from local appellations. The probable origin would appear to be, not from Frere, a friar or member of a religious community, but as a distinctive appellation subjoined to the family surname, of which many instances are to be found, where two brothers bore the same christian name—a circumstance which happened in the house of Ufford, and which caused the younger child to be called Peter Ufford, le Frere. The appellation of Le Cosyn has been used in the same manner; and the transition to the simple names of Frere and Cousin, or Cozens, was thus easily made.

The name of Frewen (variously spelt in ancient records, Frewyn, Freuen, Frewin, and Frewen) is an ancient Saxon one, and William of Malmesbury incidentally notices it, when relating an absurd story, in which one Frewen, a chaplain of St. Wolstan, the last Saxon Bishop of Worcester, is described as playing no very creditable part.

Richard Frewen, eldest son of Richard Frewen de Forthey, who was buried at Hanley Castle in 1546, and grandson of Richard Frewen, bailiff of Worcester in 1473, had, by his wife, Margaret, who d. in 1598, with other children, a second son,

Mr. Frewen is a magistrate for the counties of Leicester and Rutland, and was returned to parliament for the southern division of Leicestershire in 1835.

Lineage.

STEPHEN FREWEN, bapt. 19 Oct. 1600, youngest son of the first marriage of the Rev. John Frewen, rector of Northiam, and brother of Accepted Frewen, Archbishop of York, was a citizen of London, of the Skinners' Company. He realized a large fortune in trade, which was much increased by his inheriting the Archbishop's property, of which he conveyed 27,000 guineas in specie in his carriage to London, after the prelate's funeral. This money, which he deposited with Sir Robert Vyner, the banker, was by this last lent to King CHARLES II., and all lost on the shutting up of the Exchequer. As a trifling compensation, government allowed him £300 per annum, and offered to settle the rent of the Post Office on him and his heirs for ever, which being then only £100 per annum, he did not think worth his acceptance, and he was deprived of the £300 annuity in the reign of King WILLIAM, by an alteration in the Excise, from which it arose. Mr Alderman Frewen purchased Brickwall House of William White, Esq., and bought other large estates in the cos. of Lincoln, Middlesex, Kent, and Sussex. He lived to a great age, having survived two attacks of the plague, and d. at Brickwall, and was buried at Northiam, 11 September, 1679. ### Lineage.

The Fulfords are of Saxon origin, and held Folefort, as it is written in Domesday Book, from which place the name is derived. Here, as it appears by records, as well as registries in the College of Arms, they were seated in the time of RICHARD I., and have continued in possession of the same name, in the male line, by uninterrupted descent during a period of more than six hundred years. The mansion, which is a quadrangular pile of building, is still in good repair, though one of the most ancient in the west of England, standing in a park well diversified with fine timber, and with extensive woods and plantations around it. This house was garrisoned for CHARLES I., and was taken by a part of Fairfax's army under the command of Col. Okey, in Dec. 1645. Many knights of the family distinguished themselves in the Holy Land, Sir Baldwin de Fulford more particularly. Sir Thomas Fulford was one of the knights who went up with the Earl of Devon and relieved Exeter when besieged by Perkin Warbeck, in 1497.

The first of the family, according to the records in the Heralds' Office, is

Prince styles Sir Baldwin "a great soldier and a traveller of so undaunted resolution, that, for the honour and liberty of a royal lady, in a castle besieged by the infidels, he fought a combat with a Sarazen; for bulk and bigness an unequal match, (as the representation of him cut in the wainscot in Fulford Hall doth plainly show,) whom yet he vanquished, and rescued the lady." He m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heiress of Sir John Bozom, of Bozomzeal, and by her, who m. 2ndly, Sir William Huddersfield, attorney-general to EDWARD IV., had issue,

Lineage.

The family of Galbraith is of the remotest antiquity: its name is derived from the Celtic, as will be seen by Fraser's account of it, being formerly called "Clann a Bhreatanuich," and originally belongs to the Lennox. It was in the parish of Baldernoch, co. Stirling, that the Galbraiths of Baldernoch, (anciently, Baldrunich, or Druidstown,) chiefs of the name, had their place of residence. There is a charter from Malduin, Earl of Lennox, to Maurice Galbraith, in the reign of ALEXANDER II., conveying to him the lands of Gartonbenach; and in the year 1238, we find the same barony granted to Arthur Galbraith, representative of Maurice, under the name of Bathernock, which evidently is a corruption of Baldrunich. The family before us is sprung from the Galbraiths of Gigha, who descended from the Galbraiths of Baldernock, having fled with Lord James Stuart, youngest son of Murdach, Duke of Albany, from the Lennox, after burning Dumbarton, in the reign of JAMES I. They continued to hold that island, until after 1590, from the Macdonalds of the Isles, and in Fraser's statistical account of its inhabitants, the following occurs:—"The majority of them are of the names of Galbraith and Macneill, the former reckoned the more ancient. The Galbraiths,† in the Gaelic language, are called Breatanuich, or Clann-a-Breatanuich, i. e., Britons, or the "children of the Briton," and were once reckoned a great name in Scotland, according to the following lines:—

"Bhreatanuich o'n Talla dhearg‡ Hailse sir Alba do shloinneadh."

That is,

"Galbraith 's from the Red Tower,‡
Noblest of Scottish sirnames."

ARCHIBALD GALBRAITH, Esq., grandfather of the present proprietor, m. Mary Smith, and was father of

DANIEL GALBRAITH, Esq., who m. in 1765, Margaret, dau. of Archibald Steuart, Esq. * Elizabeth Fraser, b. in 1797, is only dau. of James Fraser, master attendant of Plymouth Dock-yard, (of the Frasers of Lovat,) b. in 1740-1, one of the three sons of Donald Fraser and Mary Macdonald, dau. of Donald Gorn, second son of Macdonald of Slate, now represented by Lord Macdonald. The eldest son, Alexander-Macdonald Fraser, d lieut. in the army, at Nova Scotia, in 1780; the second son, Æneas Fraser, d. at Bombay, capt. and paymaster of the 42nd Highlanders, in Dec. 1784, without issue.

† Galbraith is a compound of two Gaelic words, Gall Bhreatan—i. e., Strange Briton, or Low Country Briton.

‡ This Talla dhearg, or Red Tower, is probably Dumbarton, (in Gaelic, Dun-Bhreatain—i. e., the Hill of the Britons,) whence, it is said, the first Galbraiths came to Gigha.

GIBSON OF QUERNMORE PARK.

GIBSON, JOHN, Esq. late of Quernmore Park, co. Lancaster, s. to the family estates on the death of his father, in 1832.

Lineage.

The surname of Gibson is of great antiquity both in England and Scotland. In both kingdoms it is met with at a period not long subsequent to the Norman Conquest; and in both, but especially in the latter, have been many eminent men of the name. In Scotland are families of the name which ranked amongst the free barons, or lesser nobility, of that kingdom more than five hundred years ago; and no less than five Scotch families of Gibson, or rather branches of one and the same ancient and wide-spreading house, have been raised to the baronetage of Scotland. The Lancashire Gibsons, traditionally derived from Scotland, have been settled in the co. of Lancaster nearly two centuries and a half, (since the time of JAMES I.,) and during the greatest part of that time, have possessed considerable property there. They have at different periods been high sheriffs, and are allied to several ancient and distinguished families. They were formerly Lords of Yelland, in Lancashire, but the Yelland and other extensive estates which they once held, of the value of three thousand pounds a year or upwards, have been alienated. The Yelland branch of the family terminated in females, on the death, unm., of GEORGE GIBSON, Esq. of Yelland Hall. Upon his decease his Yelland and other estates devolved upon SARAH GIBSON and ANNE GIBSON. These ladies were the daus., and eventually co-heirs of ROBERT GIBSON, Esq., by Sarah, dau. of the Very Rev. Dean William Coxe, D.D. Mr. Gibson was a barrister-at-law, and recorder of Lancaster. He d. suddenly, when on the northern circuit, in the prime of life. Of his two daus., and eventually co-heirs, Anne, m. William Wickham, Esq. of Yorkshire, (of the family of the celebrated William, of Wickham, and ancestor of the Right Hon. William Wickham, who was secretary for Ireland during a part of Mr. Pitt's administration,) and the other, Sarah, d. unm. She d. seised of estates in the counties of Lancaster and Westmoreland, all of which went, under her will, to the Gibsons of Myerscough. The Gibsons of Myerscough, to whom she left her landed property, and of whom we have to treat, spring from

CHARLES GIBSON, a younger son of Edmond Gibson, of Roos-court, in the parish of Dalton, co. Lancaster, where he possessed a good estate. Mr. Charles Gibson purchased the Myerscough estate, on which he settled previous to his death. He m. Frances, dau. of Ralph Assheton, Esq. of Laylam, co. Lancaster, and great grand-dau. of Sir Ralph Assheton, Knt., chief of the ancient and eminent knightly family of the Asshetons (afterwards baronets), of Assheton-under-Lyne, and Middleton, co. Lancaster, the principal branch of which terminated, on the death of Sir Ralph Assheton, Bart., in two co-heiresses; one of whom m. an ancestor of the Earls of Wilton, and the other, an ancestor of the Lords Suffield. Mr. Gibson left (with a dau., Mary, wife of William Parke, Esq. of Whitbeck Hall,) two sons, ROBERT and JOHN. The elder,

ROBERT GIBSON, Esq. of Myerscough, s. as heir. He served the office of high-sheriff for Lancashire, and was a magistrate for the county. He d. unm., at an advanced age. Previous to his death, the estates of the elder branch of the family had come by will to his younger brother,

This gentleman m. Anne, dau., and eventually sole heiress (who had a considerable fortune) of William-Philip Fulford, Esq., a merchant in London, descended from the ancient and eminent knightly family of the Fulfords, of Fulford, co. CHARLES GIBSON, Esq. of Quernmore Park and Myerscough House, eldest son of the Rev. John Gibson, and Anne Fulford, s. as heir both to the estates of his own and the elder branch of the family. He m. Charlotte, dau. of Edward Wilson, Esq. of Dallam Tower, in Westmorland, by Dorothy, his wife, dau. and co-heir of Sir William Fleming, Bart. of Rydal Hall, in the same county. Mr. Gibson having survived his first wife, m. 2ndly, Isabella-Elizabeth, eldest dau. of Sir John-Thomas Stanley, Bart. of Alderley, co. Chester, but by this lady, who survived her husband, he had no issue. He was s. by his eldest son,

CHARLES GIBSON, Esq. of Quernmore Park and Myerscough House, high-sheriff for Lancashire, a deputy-lieutenant, and in the commission of the peace. He m. Jane-Elizabeth, only dau. of the Rev. John Alexander Hunter, of Harwick, co. Of the same family with the Gibsons of Quernmore Park are the Gibsons of Barfield, co. Cumberland, noticed amongst the gentry of that county in Lysons' History of Cumberland. Of this branch was the Rev. Edmond Gibson, who m. the widow of Major Warburton, (of a branch settled in Ireland, of the eminent Cheshire family of the Warburtons, Baronets, of Warburton and Arley,) and dau. of Andrew Hudleston, Esq. of Hutton John, co. ## GIFFARD OF CHILLINGTON.

GIFFARD, THOMAS-WILLIAM, Esq. of Chillington, co. Stafford, b. 28 March, 1789; s. his father 1 Aug. 1823. Mr. Giffard is major of the Staffordshire militia.

Lineage.

OSBORNE DE BOLEBEC, a noble Norman, living in the time of RICHARD I., surnamed Sans Peur, Duke of Normandy, m. Avelina, sister of Gunnora, the second wife of Duke Richard, and by her had,

I. WALTER, who obtained the name of "Giffard," or the Liberal, and was created Count of Longueville by Duke Richard II., probably about 1025. He acquired great renown in the armies of WILLIAM, achieving several signal victories for Normandy, in the war between that country and France. When the Duke, upon the accession of Harold to the English throne, desired to invade this island, many, indeed most of the Norman nobles, held cautiously back from proffering aid, being wearied and impoverished by the continued struggles in which WILLIAM had been engaged since his father's death. But a few stanch friends, amongst the foremost of whom was this Walter and his brother, coming nobly forward with offers of men, ships, &c., the laggards were thereby warmed to the undertaking, and the expedition was accordingly set on foot. In the subsequent success of his chief, the Compte de Longueville largely participated; he obtained no less than one hundred and seven lordships in the conquered country, and was constituted Earl of the county of Buckingham. (For the line of this nobleman, see BURKE'S Extinct and Dormant Peerage.)
II. Osborne.

The second son,

OSBORNE GYFFARDE, having likewise aided in placing England under the yoke of the Norman, had of course his portion of the spoil, and the fertile county of Gloucester was allotted as the locality of his reward. Here he held the extensive manors of Brimesfield, Rochemtune, Alderberie, and Stoche; upon the first named of which he settled, and there subsequently a great castle was built, (temp. STEPHEN,) which continued to be the residence of the family until it was destroyed by the army of EDWARD II., in the Baronial war, anno 1322. This Osborne died about the year 1086, and was s. by his son,

ELIAS GIFFARDE, who, with Ala, his wife, gave lands and woods in Bockholt to the Abbey of St. Peter, in Gloucester, about the year 1100. He left two sons,

I. ELIAS GIFFARDE, third Lord of Brimsfield, who had three sons,
   1. Elias, who d. s. p. in 1191.
   2. Walter, a benefactor to Gloucester Abbey.
   3. Richard, one of the "Justices of the Court," temp. HENRY II. He was father of THOMAS GIFFARD, who s. his uncle, Elias, and carried on the line. His descendant, John Giffard, had summons to parliament from 24 June, 1295, to 10 April, 1299, as BARON GIFFARD of Brimsfield.
II. Gilbert.

The younger son,

GILBERT GIFFARDE, left at his decease, with a dau., m. to Peter Corbizon, of Studley, co. Warwick, and of Chillington, co. Stafford, a son,

WILLIAM GIFFARD, who appears to have been the first of the family who bore for arms, "Az., three stirrups, or." He was father of

PETER GIFFARDE, who was highly distinguished for his military exploits in Ireland, under his kinsman Richard de Clare, commonly called Strongbow, Earl of Pembroke, and was rewarded by a grant of the manor of Tachmelin, in that kingdom. After his return from the Irish war, Sir Peter m. his cousin, Avicia Corbucion, and thus acquired the manors of Chillington and Walton, in the co. of Stafford. He was s. by his son,

PETER GIFFARDE, of Chillington, who m. Margaret de Chuddeley, and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN GIFFARD, who m. Ada, dau. of Hugh Courtenay, Baron of Okehampton. He d. in 1316, and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN GIFFARD, of Chillington, who m. about the beginning of the fourteenth century, Catherine Stafford de Marston, and in her right became possessed of the manors of Marston and Enson, (near to the town of Stafford,) which are still held by the family. In 1322, he was returned by the sheriff of Staffordshire as a member of the Great Council, summoned to be held at York; and in 1324, he was again elected to the parliament holden in London. He d. in 1366, and was s. by his son,

EDMUND GIFFARD, of Chillington, who m. a dau. of Venables, Baron of Kinderton, and dying in 1379, was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN GIFFARD, who was Lord of Chillington in 1394, and was s. by his son,

THOMAS GIFFARD, of Chillington, who m. Joyce, dau. and heir of Sir Robert Fraunceys, of Whiston, co. Stafford, and had as her dowry that estate. This Thomas was sheriff of Staffordshire, in 1411. At his decease in 1416, he left an only child,

ROBERT GIFFARD, of Chillington, who m. 1st, Isabella Blount, but by that lady had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Cassandra, dau. of Thomas Humphreston, and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN GIFFARD, of Chillington, who m. 1st, Jocosa Hoorde, and had by her two daus., Dorothea, m. 1st, to John Congreve, Esq. of Congreve, and 2ndly, to Francis, Earl Ferrers; and Cassandra, m. to Humphrey Swinnerton, Esq. of Swinnerton. He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth Greyseley, and had, with a dau., Frances, who m. to Sir John Talbot, of Grafton, two sons, viz., THOMAS, his heir; and William, Archbishop of Rheims, a duke and peer of France. This Sir John Giffard was five times sheriff of his native county; and to him HENRY VIII. granted the dissolved monastery of the Black Ladies, at Brewood, in 1539. He d. in 1556, and was s. by his son,

SIR THOMAS GIFFARD, who m. 1st, Dorothy, dau. and heiress of Sir John Montgomery, and had a dau., Elizabeth, m. to Sir John Port, of Etwall, one of the Justices of the King's Bench. Sir Thomas m. 2ndly, Ursula, dau. of Sir Robert Throgmorton, of Caughton, by whom he had four sons and five daus. He was sheriff of the co. of Stafford in the lifetime of his father, in 1530 and 1553. He d. in 1560, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN GIFFARD, Esq. of Chillington, high-sheriff of Staffordshire in 1573, who was honoured, in Aug. 1575, by a visit from Queen ELIZABETH, at Chillington. Her majesty came from Stafford Castle, and after a sojourn of a day or two at Chillington, proceeded to Hartlebury, the seat of the Bishop of Worcester. Such minute records as have been handed down to us of the Regal festivities of Kenilworth and other places, do not exist in relation to the royal progress to Chillington; but it is sufficient to indicate the unlimited means of the mansion, and the high esteem in which its owner was held, that the Queen should have selected it for her sojourn, while so many noble Staffordshire mansions remained unvisited. John Giffard m. Joyce, dau. of James Leveson, of Lilleshall and Trentham, Esq., by whom he acquired a moiety of the manor of Stow Heath, near Wolverhampton, and had eight sons and two daus. He d. in 1612, and was s. by his eldest son,

WALTER GIFFARD, Esq. of Chillington, who m. in 1579, Philippa, dau. and co-heir of Henry White, Esq. of Southwarnborough, in the co. of Southampton, and had, with other issue,

PETER, his heir.
Andrew, m. Catherine Leveson, and left at his decease (he was killed in a skirmish during the civil wars,) three sons, Thomas; Augustine, professor of divinity at Douay; and Bonaventure, a distinguished churchman of the reign of JAMES II. He was b. in 1642, and d. in 1733.

Walter Giffard was s. 29 April, 1632, by his eldest son,

PETER GIFFARD, Esq. of Chillington. This gentleman m. Frances, second dau. of Walter Fowler, Esq. of St. Thomas, in the co. of Stafford, and had, with five younger sons and seven daus.,

WALTER, his heir.
John, of Black Ladies, who m. Catherine, dau. of Richard Hawkins, of Nash, co. Kent, and had, with a dau., Frances, one son, JOHN GIFFARD, of Black Ladies, who m. Catherine, dau. of John Taylor, Esq. of Fockbury, co. Worcester, and dying in 1709, left, with four daus., of whom the eldest, Catherine, m. to Thomas More, Esq. of Bamborough, three sons, PETER, who s. to Chillington; John, of Madeley, co. Salop; and Walter.

Peter Giffard, in his extended and chequered life, saw the entire downfall and the perfect restoration of his family. From the commencement of the great rebellion, he appears to have taken an active and decided part in it, for at an early period we find his estates confiscated, and himself a prisoner. Chillington, so recently receiving a royal guest, became a royal garrison. The estates were sold by the Drury House Commissioners; and the members of the family, after fighting in the king's army as long as an army existed, were in prison, in banishment, or in concealment. When the second CHARLES made his ill-advised descent on England, in 1651, several of the Giffards joined him, and fought on the fatal field of Worcester. After his defeat, the king retreated towards Kidderminster, and was advised by the Earl of Derby to seek a temporary retreat at Boscobel, where the Earl had been safely concealed for many days, during a hot pursuit, in an earlier part of the war. The king, assenting to this proposition, moved with his few faithful followers in the direction of Kidderminster; but on Kinfare Heath, it being night, was terribly discomfited by the acknowledgment of his guide that he had lost his way. In this dilemma, a gentleman among his followers offered his services as guide; this was Charles Giffard, a nephew of Peter Giffard, of Chillington. Well and cleverly did he perform his task, guiding the royal fugitive safely and quickly to the spot where immediate security might be found. It is not necessary, in a work like the present, to furnish the details of the marvellous escape of CHARLES; but it should never be forgotten, that the fidelity of the Pendrills—a fidelity so strong, as almost to have become a proverb—was rather towards their beloved chief, the Giffard, than the Stuart. They were dependants and followers of the Giffards, and at the bidding of their liege lord would have secreted and guarded and guided even Old Noll himself with as much courage, perseverance, and zeal, as they shewed to the worn and wearied monarch. Peter Giffard survived that troublous period, and after the Restoration, received (somewhat tardily) a royal grant of his estreated possessions. A few months after this, having survived his lady, and most of his contemporaries, he executed a deed, by which he surrendered all he possessed to his eldest son, reserving only for himself a small farm, the service of two retainers, and such maintenance (saith the deed) "as was becoming to a gentleman of his quality." He did not long enjoy the calm this arrangement seemed to promise, but having seen his family reinstated in the wealth, influence, and honour, which was their heritage, he died "full of days," 25 June, 1663. His successor,

WALTER GIFFARD, Esq. of Chillington, b. in 1611, m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Sir Thomas Holt, Bart. of Aston, by whom he had JOHN, his successor, with two other sons, and four daus. He m. 2ndly, Anne, dau. of Thomas Huggeford, Esq. of Solihull, but had no other issue. He d. in 1688, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN GIFFARD, Esq. of Chillington, b. in 1637, m. Frances, dau. of William Fitzherbert, Esq. of Swinnerton, and dying in 1694, was s. by his only surviving son,

THOMAS GIFFARD, Esq. of Chillington, who m. in 1688, Mary, dau. of John Thimelby, Esq. of Irnham, co. Lincoln, but dying without issue, in 1718, was s. by his kinsman,

PETER GIFFARD, Esq. of Black Ladies, (refer to John, second son of Peter, who suffered during the civil wars, and died in 1663,) who thus became of CHILLINGTON, and representative of the family. He m. 1st, Winifred, dau. of Robert Howard, Esq. of Horecross, but by her had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Barbara, dau. of Sir Robert Throckmorton, Bart. of Caughton, and had,

GIFFARD OF BRIGHTLEY.

GIFFARD, EDWARD, Esq. of Kilcorrall, co. Wexford, b. 19 Dec. 1812; s. to the representation of the family upon the demise of his brother in 1833.

Lineage.

The family of Giffard is of great antiquity in Devonshire, where it flourished as early as the reign of HENRY II.

SIR ROGER GIFFARD, a younger son of John Giffard, of Halesbury, having m. Margaret, dau. and co-heiress of John Cobleigh, of Brightley, near Chittlehampton, acquired with her that estate, which he had inherited from the Fitzwarines, who had assumed the name of Brightley. Their son,

JOHN GIFFARD, Esq., m. Mary, dau. of Sir Richard Granville, of Stow, in Cornwall, (ancestor of the Earls of Bath,) by Maud, dau. and co-heir of John Beville, Esq. of Gwarnock, in that co., and by her had, besides many other children, his eldest son,

JOHN GIFFARD, Esq. of Brightley, who m. Honor, dau. of Walter Erle, Esq. of Charborough, co. Dorset, and was father of

ARTHUR GIFFARD, Esq., who m. Anne, dau. of Thomas Leigh, Esq. of Borough, in Devonshire, and had, besides four daus., five sons, viz.,

John, aged eighteen
Arthur,* aged fifteen
George, aged fourteen
Lewis, aged twelve

} in 1620.

The eldest son,

JOHN GIFFARD, Esq., b. in 1602, s. his father, at Brightley, in 1616, and during the civil wars was one of the stanchest adherents of his sovereign. He was "decimated, sequestrated, and imprisoned,"† and paid £1136 as a composition for his estates. After the Restoration he was selected to be a Knight of the proposed Order of the Royal Oak, and d. in 1666. According to his biographer, "he was a gentleman of a very grave and comely aspect, of an obliging carriage, of a sober life, and a pious conversation. Such was his deportment towards men in all his actions, as if he were conscious that the eye of God was upon him; and such his behaviour towards God, in the instances of devotion and religion, as if he thought he was a spectacle to angels and to men. Insomuch his sobriety and piety brought great reputation to the Royal cause in those parts where he lived; and he was an excellent ornament to his profession, both as a subject and a Christian."† Colonel Giffard m. Joan, the youngest dau. of Sir John Wyndham, of Orchard Wyndham, in Somersetshire, by Joan, dau. of Sir Henry Portman, and by her had three sons‡ and several daus. ## GILBERT OF DEVON.

GILBERT, THE REV. JOHN-POMROY, of The Priory, co. Cornwall, A.M., Prebendary of Exeter, b. in 1779; m. in 1808, Mary, dau. of Mathew Storm, Esq. of Ilfracombe, and has had issue, EDMUND, deceased, WALTER-RALEIGH, Capt. Roy. Art., John-Pomroy, and Otho, Lieut. Royal Art. Mr. Gilbert is in the commission of the peace for Cornwall.

Lineage.

Westcott observes that Gilbert, the ancestor of the present family, "possessed lands in Manadon in EDWARD the Confessor's days," and Prince adds that the Gilberts "have matched as they descended down into honourable houses, as of Champernon, Croker, Hill, Chudleigh, Agar, Molineux, Pomeroy, &c., and have yielded matches to others, in particular to the noble family of the Grenvils. They have married also divers daus. and heirs, as Compton, Champernon, Valetort, (whereby they touch the blood royal,) Reynward, Trenoch, Littleton, alias Westcott, Kelly, and others, from whose loins have proceeded many eminent persons which were of old, men of renown. Such was Otho, called also Otis Gilbert, high-sheriff of Devonshire 15 EDWARD IV."

This OTHO or OTES GILBERT inherited Greenway, a seat beautifully situated on a bold elevation, overhanging the river Dart, about four miles from Dartmouth. Otho had three sons,

I. JOHN, (Sir,) knighted by Queen ELIZABETH in 1576, m. a dau. of Sir Richard Chudleigh, Knt. of Ashton, but d. s. p. This eminent and learned man was interred in St. Peter's Cathedral, Exeter, where a sumptuous monument remains to his memory.
II. HUMPHREY, (Sir,) of whose line we treat.
III. Adrian.

* Prince, who preached his funeral sermon, states, that this Arthur Giffard was "an able scholar, a constant and painful preacher, an orthodox divine, and a pious, good man." He obtained the rectory of Biddeford through his relative, the Earl of Bath, from which living, in common with numerous other loyal clergymen, he was ejected. He was, however, restored on the return of CHARLES II., and d. in March, 1668.

† Prince's Worthies of Devon, fol. 1701.

‡ The descendants of Col. John Giffard are founder's kin of Wadham College, Oxford, his wife's grandfather, John Wyndham, (son and heir of Sir John Wyndham, of Orchard,) having m. Florence, sister and co-heir of Nicholas Wadham, Esq., the founder of that College. They are also descended from three children of EDWARD I.

The second son,

Sir Humphrey Gilbert, Knt., was eminently distinguished by his discoveries in the northern seas, where Gilbert's Straits are called after him to this day, and by the establishment of the colony of Newfoundland. Prince, in his Worthies of Devon, gives an interesting memoir of this enterprising seaman. He received the honour of knighthood in 1577, and at the same time his Royal mistress presented him, as a token of particular favour, with a golden anchor, with a large pearl at the point, which he ever after wore in gratitude for his sovereign's kindness. Sir Humphrey, who was half-brother of Sir Walter Raleigh, m. Anne, dau. of Sir Anthony Agar, Knt. of Kent, and had, with one dau., nine sons, the eldest, Sir John Gilbert, Knt., an officer of reputation, m. a dau. of Sir Richard Molyneux, of Sefton, but d. in 1608, without issue, as did all his brothers, except

GODDARD OF CLIFFE PYPARD.

THE SENIOR BRANCH OF THE GODDARDS OF WILTSHIRE.

GODDARD, HORATIO-NELSON, Esq. of Cliffe House, and Purton House, both in the county of Wilts, M.A. of Brasennose College, Oxon, b. 8 Dec. 1806; m. 8 April, 1840, Anne-Elizabeth, dau. of the late Rev. Thomas Le Mesurier, B.D., rector of Haughton-le-Skerne, co. Durham, and domestic chaplain to Viscount Sidmouth, and by her has one surviving dau., Katherine-Anne. Mr. Goddard, who is a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for Wiltshire, and capt. in the Wilts militia, s. to the representation of the family upon the death of his father, the late Rev. Edward Goddard, 22 Jan. 1839. Capt. Goddard is patron of the living of Cliffe Pypard, the gift of the rectory and vicarage having belonged to his family ever since it was first alienated from the monastery of Lacock, in the time of King HENRY VIII.

Lineage.

The family of Goddard, of Wilts, or Godard, as it was anciently spelt, is of very great antiquity. It derives its origin from a Saxon source, possessed property in England previous to the CONQUEST, and is recorded in Domesday. Subsequently to this, some of the family resided in Hants, and three Godards are recorded in the Winton Domesday, as residing and possessing land there, temp. HENRY I. After this period, becoming more numerous, the family appears to have separated, one branch having settled in the cos. of Leicester and Norfolk, time of King

JOHN, (recorded in Chancellor's Rolls, 3rd year of King JOHN, 1202.)

In 1233, Thomas Godard, son of Godard, held lands in Middleton, co. Norfolk. In 31st of EDWARD III., a fine was levied on the lands of Nicholas Godard, of the same place. Lands were conveyed to Nicholas and Walter Godard, 3rd of RICHARD II. About this time Walter Godard was lord of Denvers, having m. the heiress of that family; his heir, Robert Godard, held a lordship in Walpole, and was buried in Terrington Church, 1448. Of this family was Sir John Godard, Governor of Louviers, in Normandy, 6th HENRY V. (See Bloomfield's Norf.)

In the reign of King JOHN we gain the first authentic information of the settlement of the Godard family in Wilts.

WALTER GODARD-VILLE, or GODARD-VIL, who, for some purpose, appears to have added to his originally Saxon name the Norman termination of ville, (which his descendants as readily discarded,) held tenements and lands in Chippenham and Albourn, co. Wilts. From him lineally descended

JOHN GODARD, de Upham, in Albourn, (in which his ancestor, Walter Godard-ville, had possessed lands several centuries before,) and de Cliffe Pypard. In the visitation of Wilts, by Robert Tresswell, Bluemantle, 1569, he is stated to have m. Elizabeth, dau. of Wm. Berenger, of Manningford Bruce. He d. 10 March, 1545, leaving issue,

In 1641, he was honoured by a letter from CHARLES I., "earnestly entreating" him to complete the publication of an atlas of Scotland, which had been projected by Timothy Pont. To this work Mr. Gordon zealously devoted himself, and in such high estimation were his labours held, that by two acts of the Scottish Parliament, he was exempted from all military burdens, while the general assembly of the church published a request to the clergy, to afford him every assistance in their power. Thus encouraged, the undertaking was completed in the year 1648, and soon afterwards published by the Blaeus, of Amsterdam, under the title of "Theatrum Scotiæ." A second edition was published in 1655, and a third in 1662. Besides the "Theatrum Scotiæ," Mr. Gordon wrote several works, which still remain in MS. The chief of these is a History of the Family of Gordon from the earliest period to the year 1595, bearing this title, "Origo et Progressus Familiæ illustrissimæ Gordoniorum in Scotiâ," and, like all his productions, written in Latin, with ease, elegance, and accuracy. He d. 18 Aug. 1661, and was interred in the family burial place at New Machar, on the 6th of Sept. following. A portrait of him, by Jameson, the Scottish Vandyke, is preserved in the public hall of Marischal College; an engraving from this painting was published in Smith's Iconographia Scotica, and another print lately appeared in Chambers' Lives of Illustrious Scotsmen, where there is a memoir of Mr. Gordon. II. John-Hyslop, b. 6 Nov. 1829.
III. James, b. 31 March, 1833.

I. Margaret d. in 1835. II. Agnes-Marion.

Mr. Gordon, who is seventeenth in direct male descent from Sir Adam de Gordon, of Lochinvar, in the Glenkens of Galloway, the companion in arms of Wallace, s. to the ancient family estate of Greenlaw, and assumed the surname and designation of Gordon, of Culvennan, in terms of the entail, upon the death of his uncle, the late James Gordon, Esq., s. p., 27 May, 1843.

Lineage.

This is a branch of the noble house of Kenmure and Lochinvar, which traces its descent from Richard de Gordoun, in 1120, and from the valiant Sir Adam de Gordoun, one of the "Scots wham Bruce hath aften led."

The Culvennan tree can be surpassed by few in the country; it exhibits descent in many ways from various sovereigns, including DUNCAN I. and ROBERT BRUCE, as well as from the flower of chivalry and of nobility in England, Scotland, and Ireland.

SIR JOHN GORDON, of Lochinvar, who d. in 1517, fifth in descent from the above-mentioned Sir Adam, (for details of whom see Viscount Kenmure, in BURKE'S Peerage,) left two sons, Sir Robert, his successor, and William. His estate of Craichlaw, co. Wigton, he settled on his second son,

WILLIAM GORDON, of Craichlaw, who d. in 1545, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM GORDON, of Craichlaw. This gentleman d. in 1570, and was s. by his son,

JOHN GORDON, of Craichlaw, whose name we find attached to the bond by the Scottish nobility, for the establishment of JAMES VI. on the Scottish throne. He d. in 1580, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM GORDON, of Craichlaw. This gentleman purchased the estate of Culvennan, and dying in 1636, was s. therein by his son,

WILLIAM GORDON, of Culvennan, an enthusiastic presbyterian, suffering, with his kinsman Sir Alexander Gordon, of Earlston, Bart., and others of the Scottish nobility and gentry, every species of persecution; their estates were forfeited, and their mansions converted into barracks for the soldiery. Mr. Gordon's estates were, however, restored to him by act of Parliament, after the revolution, and dying in 1703, he was s. by his son, WILLIAM GORDON, of Culvennan, to whom s.

SIR ALEXANDER GORDON, of Culvennan, lieutenant-colonel of the Kirkcudbrightshire local militia, and successively sheriff of the cos. of Wigton and Kirkcudbright. Sir Alexander's pride in his great ancestor Sir Adam, induced him to visit Dumbarton Castle, for the purpose of seeing the sword of Sir Adam's companion in arms, the patriot WALLACE. Finding it neglected and almost, as he thought, forgotten, he represented the case to the Duke of Wellington, then at the head of the Ordnance department. The consequence was, he received a letter of thanks for his suggestions; the sword which made "tyrants fall at every blow" was sent to the Tower, and when properly mounted and furnished, returned to Dumbarton Castle, where it now forms a most interesting object to visitors. Sir Alexander, who was knighted in 1800, m. 17 July, 1769, Grace, only sister of Sir John-Dalrymple Hay, of Glenluce, Bart., and had, with other children, who d. young,

2. Alexander, member of the Institution of Civil Engineers, b. 5 May, 1802, m. 14 July, 1828, Sarah, dau. of Alexander Cock, Esq. of the city of London.

3. Isabella, m. 19 Aug. 1833, to James-Richard Clark, Esq., but d. without issue, 28 May, 1834.

Lineage.

This family, a branch of the ancient and ennobled line of the same name in Scotland, is stated to have gone from Berwickshire to Ireland during the period of the civil wars in North Britain. From the imperfect state of the Scotch records, and the destruction of family papers, the particulars of the descent cannot be traced with accuracy, but we find a friendly intercourse and acknowledgment of consanguinity subsisting between the Irish branch and the parent stock. Many years after the period of the settlement of the former in the sister island, Lord Adam Gordon, a general in the army, fourth son of Alexander, second Duke of Gordon, during a visit to that country, resided with his cousin, John Gordon, of Florida, and at a subsequent epoch, in the year 1783, the intercourse was renewed upon the occasion of some members of the Gordon family visiting Scotland, when they were received with much kindness by Alexander, fourth Duke of Gordon, who fully recognised the relationship. The old and eminent family of GRACE ranks amongst the earliest of the Anglo-Norman settlers in Ireland. Under the banner of Richard de Clare, the well-known Strongbow, RAYMOND, surnamed Le Gros, landed in that kingdom, became subsequently (anno 1176) its viceroy, and, marrying Basilia de Clare, Strongbow's sister, acquired the extensive district in the co. of Kilkenny, still denominated the "Cantred of Grace's country."

WILLIAM LE GROS, or Fitz-Raymond, the eldest son of Raymond Le Gros, second son of William Fitzgerald, of the Castle of Kerrin, second son of Gerald Fitzwalter de Windesor, Castellan of Windsor, (see FITZGERALD, KNIGHT OF GLIN,) became Baron of Courtstown, or Tullaroan, and Lord of Grace's country. He m. Margaret, dau. of Robert Fitz-Warren, of Wales; but we pass from him to his descendant, (the twelfth in succession,)

† The family of DOWELL, or MAC DOWELL, was of great antiquity. BURKE, the learned author of the Hibernia Dominicana, in speaking of the religious foundations in the county of Roscommon, thus refers to it:—"The noble family of Dowell is lineally descended from Heremon. The present head is Lucas Mac Dowell, Esq., a gentleman of opulence, and an honour to the Catholic religion, which he professes." The same right rev. author further informs us, that amongst the distinguished members of this family was Felix Mac Dowell, who, having finished his studies at Valladolid, taught philosophy in Sardinia and Paris, and subsequently theology at Rome. He d. in prison, in Dublin, anno 1709.—Hib. Dom., page 586. ### Lineage.

The long and honourable descent of the line, formerly of Ballylinch, and now of Gracefield, from the once powerful and distinguished feudal Barons of Courtstown, being already recorded in our account of the Mantua branch of this family, now represented by Oliver-John-Dowell-Grace, Esq., who is also in the male line the chief of his house, we will merely revert to

MICHAEL GRACE, of Gracefield, who inherited as co-heir-at-law, with Robert Grace, son of the attainted Baron of Courtstown, the undevised estates of Edmund Sheffield, the last Duke of Buckingham and Normanby, in the cos. of Sussex, Middlesex, and York. This gentleman m. Mary, dau. of John Galwey, of Lota House, co. Cork, by Elizabeth, his wife, sister of Sir John Meade, Bart., grandfather of the 1st Earl of Clanwilliam. By her he had issue,

(See BURKE'S Peerage and Baronetage.) Mr. Grace was eminently distinguished by his classical attainments and his accomplishments and manners as a highbred gentleman. On two occasions he had been, at a heavy expense, the unsuccessful candidate to represent the Queen's Co. in parliament, but the attainment of this object of his ambition was placed beyond a doubt, and would have been attained in the short space of a few weeks, when, at the early age of 40, his valuable life terminated, 9 Jan. 1801. He m. Jane, dau. of the Hon. John Evans, of Bulgaden Hall, grandfather of John Evans Freke, 6th and present Lord Carbery, and had issue three sons and two daus., viz.,

Lineage.

In 435, Græme was made Governor of Scotland, and guardian to the young King EUGENE II. He broke down and levelled with the ground the famous wall of Antoninus, extending across the island from east to west, from Abercorn to Dumbarton, which is called from him to this day, "Græme's Dyke." From him descended

WILLIAM DE GRAHAM, who flourished in the reign of King DAVID I. He obtained from that monarch a grant of the lands of Abercorn and Dalkeith, and witnessed the charter to the monks of Holyrood-house in 1128. Directly descended from him was

SIR WILLIAM GRAHAM, of Kincardine, styled in the charters, "Willielmus Dominus de Grame de Kincardin." He was commissioner to treat with the English, 11 Dec. 1406; had a safe conduct into England, 15 May, 1412, and another from thence to Scotland about the release of JAMES I., 16 April, 1413. A charter was granted 4 Aug. 1420, "Willielmo Domino de Grame militi et Mariotæ Stewart, Sorori Roberti Ducis Albaniæ Spousæ dicti Willielmi," of the lands of Auld Montrose, Kinnaber, and Charleton, in the county of Forfar. By his first marriage, Sir William Graham had two sons, from the elder of whom descends the family of Montrose. He m. 2ndly, the Lady

Mary Stuart, second dau. of King ROBERT III., relict of George, Earl of Angus, and Sir James Kennedy, of Dunmure, and subsequently the wife of Sir Archibald Edmonstone, of Duntreith, and by her he had several sons, of whom

I. SIR ROBERT GRAHAM, of Strathcarron, was ancestor of Grahams of Fintry, of Claverhouse, Viscounts of Dundee, and the Grahams of Duntroon.
II. Patrick, was consecrated Bishop of Brechin, 1463, translated to the episcopal see of St. Andrew's, 1466.
III. WILLIAM, was the first

GRÆME, of Garvock, and direct ancestor of the present family. He was a soldier, and for his faithful services to King JAMES I., his uncle, obtained, in early life, a grant of the lands and barony of Garvock, which was afterwards confirmed in 1473, and from him the estate has descended in the direct line, from father to son, to the present time, as appears from documents among the family charters. He lived to an advanced age, and left a son,

MATTHEW LE GRÆME, of Garvock, who succeeded to William in 1502, but died soon afterwards, being advanced in years before his father's death. He was s. by his son,

ARCHIBALD GRÆME, who fell at the disastrous battle of Flodden, on 9th Sept. 1513,* leaving a son and successor,

JOHN GRÆME, of Garvock, who m. 1st, Mirabell Whyte, dau. of John Whyte, of Lumbany, and 2ndly, Katharine Arnot, dau. of Walter Arnot, of that ilk, in 1545. He left two sons,

I. JAMES, who s. him.
II. John, of Balgowan, ancestor of the Grahams of Balgoune, and of the gallant Lord Lynedoch, the hero of Barrosa. Among the sheriff records at Perth, anno 1586, there exist several contracts entered into betwixt "John Graham, of Garvock, and John Graham, of Balgoune, his sone." She was eldest dau. of Andrew Rollo, of Duncrub, and widow of George Græme, of Inchbraco.

Lineage.

"It is a melancholy reflection," says Dr. Borlase, "to look back on so many great families who have formerly adorned the county of Cornwall, and in the male line are now no more: the GRANVILLES, the Carminows, the Champernownes, the Bodrugans, Mohuns, Killegrews, Bevils, Trevanions, which had great sway and possessions in these parts. The most lasting families have only their seasons, more or less, of a certain constitutional strength. They have their spring, and summer sunshine glare, their wane, decline, and death." The Granvilles claim descent from ROLLO, the celebrated northern chieftain, who, being driven from Norway by the King of Denmark, made a descent upon England, but was repulsed by ALFRED. He was subsequently, however, more fortunate in a similar attempt upon Normandy. Invading that country in 870, he achieved its complete conquest in 912, and was invested with the Ducal dignity. He m. Gilbette, dau. of CHARLES the Simple, King of France, and had two sons. From the elder, WILLIAM, descended the CONQUEROR, and from ROBERT, the younger, created Earl of Corbeil, sprang two brothers, Robert Fitzhamon, who reduced Glamorganshire, (he left an only dau., Mabel, the wife of Robert de Courcil, natural son to HENRY I.,) and

RICHARD, surnamed DE GRANVILLE, from one of his lordships, who came into England with Duke William, and fought at Hastings. This Richard, who, as heir male, inherited the Norman honours and estates, was Earl of Corbeil, and Baron of Thorigny and Granville. He likewise possessed the castle of Neath, in Glamorganshire. He m. Constance, only dau. of Walter Giffard, Earl of Buckinghamshire and Longueville, and at his decease, in journeying to the Holy Land, left a son and successor,

RICHARD GRANVILLE, who held, temp. HENRY II., the lordship of Bideford, by half a knight's fee of the honour of Gloucester. He was direct and lineal ancestor of

SIR THEOBALD GRANVILLE, who m. Joice, dau. of Sir Thomas Beaumont, Knt., and had a son and successor,

He d. about 6 HENRY VIII. By Isabel, his 1st wife, dau. of Sir Oates Gilbert, of Compton, in Devon, he had two sons and six daus., viz., I. ROGER, his heir; II. ## GRAY OF CARNTYNE.

(Formerly of Balmarnock.)

GRAY, THE REV. JOHN HAMILTON, A.M., of Carntyne, co. Lanark, Vicar of Bolsover and Scarcliff, co. Derby, b. 29 Dec. 1800; m. 23 June, 1829, Elizabeth-Caroline, eldest dau. of James-Raymond Johnstone, Esq. of Alva, in Clackmannanshire, by Mary, his wife, sister of Sir Montague Cholmeley, Bart. of Easton, and has issue, Caroline-Maria-Agnes-Robina.

Mr. Hamilton Gray, a magistrate and a deputy-lieutenant of the co. Lanark, s. his father 12 Nov. 1833.

Lineage.

This branch of the family of Gray has possessed estates in the co. of Lanark for about three hundred years. Its ancestor, who held the lands of Tollcross towards the middle of the 16th century, had two sons, JOHN, his heir; and James, who was bred to the law, and is said to have distressed his brother with litigation, which necessitated a sale of the lands of Tollcross. The elder son,

JOHN GRAY, of Tollcross, in Lanarkshire, lived about the close of the 16th century, and alienated the property of Tollcross. The name of his wife is unknown. He was father of

WILLIAM GRAY, proprietor of the lands of Carntyne, co. Lanark, antecedently to the year 1595, who m. 1st, Margaret Craig, by whom he had a son, ARCHIBALD, his heir. He m. 2ndly, Marion, dau. of Ninian Hill, of Lambhill, in Lanarkshire, and had another son, JOHN, successor to his brother. The Hills were in possession of extensive estates more than two centuries ago, part of which were acquired by marriage with a dau. of the family of Hutchinson.* Several respectable male descendants of the Hills of Lambhill still exist, though what remains of the property has passed, in the female line, to Miss Lilias Graham, the present proprietrix. William Gray was s. by his eldest son,

ARCHIBALD GRAY, of Carntyne, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Colquhoun of Kenmure, a cadet of Colquhoun of Luss, chief of the name, but having no issue, he resigned, in 1628, the lands of Carntyne to his brother,

JOHN GRAY, who then became of Carntyne. Exactly half a century after, in 1678, he acquired part of the lands of Dalmarnock, another portion continuing in the possession of the family of Woddrop, and thenceforward, for more than a hundred years, Dalmarnock became the principal designation of his descendants. Mr. Gray began to work coal on Carntyne, which has supplied a portion of the fuel consumed in the city of Glasgow. He was a zealous covenanter, and his name is held in honour among the favourers of those principles, for having afforded the shelter of his roof to their ministers, and an occasional place of concealment to their proscribed members. He m. Janet, dau. of Anderson, of Dovehill, an ancient and opulent family in the neighbourhood of Glasgow, several successive generations of which filled the office of lord provost of the city, from 1654 until 1703. John Gray was s. in 1687, by his son,

JOHN GRAY, of Dalmarnock and Carntyne, who m. Annabella, dau. of Walter Gibson, of Hillhead, co. Lanark, and dying in 1710, was s. by his eldest son,

This family came into England with the CONQUEROR, from Gourdon, near Cahors, on the borders of Perigord, and the name is on the roll of Battell Abbey.

SIR ADAM DE GURDON, knt., living in the time of HENRY III., was in that Monarch's reign bailiff of Alton, but was outlawed for treason and rebellion, as one of the Montford faction. He was restored, however, upon the accession of EDWARD, and constituted, in 1272, keeper of the forest of Wolmer. He m. 1st, Constantia, dau. and heiress of Thomas Makarel, of Selborne, co. Southampton. He resided in that shire, in a mansion-house called The Temple, which overlooked the forest. Sir Adam m. a second wife, named Almeria, from whom he was divorced, after having had two sons, the elder of whom was seated in Wiltshire, and the younger settled himself in London. These sons appear, however to have been disinherited, for their father had a third wife, Agnes, and by her a dau., JOHANNA, to whom he left his property in Selborne. This lady m. Richard Achard, and that estate, bearing still the name of Gurdon Manor, belongs now to Magdalen College, Oxford. ## GURNEY OF KESWICK.

Gurney, Hudson, Esq. of Keswick, co. Norfolk, Fellow of the Royal Society, and Vice-President of the Antiquarian Society, b. 19 Jan. 1775; m. in 1809, Margaret, dau. of the late Robert Barclay, Esq. of Ury, Kincardineshire, M.P. for that county, by Sarah, his wife, dau. of James Allardice, of Allardice, and heiress of line to the Earls of Airth and Menteith. Mr. Gurney was elected Member of Parliament for Shaftesbury, in 1812, and for Newtown, Hants, in 1816, and in six successive parliaments.

Lineage.

The name of Gurney, or Gournay, is derived from the town of Gournay, in Normandy.

Hugo de Gournay, Lord of Gournay and the adjacent territory of Le Brai, whose arms were "pure sable," was one of the Norman Barons who commanded at the battle of Mortimer, against the French, in 1054. Coming over to England with Duke William, he participated in the victory achieved at Hastings, and was rewarded with manorial grants in Essex, which he held at the time of the Great Survey. He m. Basilia, dau. of Gerard Flatels, and sister (with Agnes, wife of Walter Giffard, Earl of Buckingham) of William, Bishop of Evereux, and was father of

Gerard de Gournay, Baron of Gournay (which fief his descendants retained until the reign of John, when they were seized upon by Philip Augustus) and Baron of Yarmouth, temp. William the Conqueror, who m. Editha, dau. (by Gundred, dau. of William the Conqueror) of William de Warrenne, Earl of Surrey, (see Burke's Extinct Peerage, art., Warrenne, Earls of Surrey,) and by her, who m. 2ndly, Dreux de Monceux, had issue,

I. Hugo de Gournay, of whom presently.

II. Gundred, who m. in 1118, Nigel de Albini, "Scutifer Conq.," to whom Henry I. granted the lands of Roger de Mowbray, in Northumberland, and was mother of

1. Roger, who assumed, by command of Henry I., the name of Mowbray, and was ancestor of the Barons Mowbray, Earls of Nottingham, Dukes of Norfolk, Earls Marshal, and Earls of Warrenne and Surrey. (See Burke's Extinct Peerage.)
2. Henry, Lord of the Barony of Camho, ancestor of the Albinis, feudal Lords of Camho.

III. A second daughter, m. Richard de Talbot, who held extensive domains in Normandy and England, temp. William the Conqueror, and was mother of

1. Geoffrey de Talbot, enumerated by the designation of "Baron," among the prelates and nobles present at the great council of the realm, witnesses to a charter of King Stephen. Fourth in descent from Geoffrey, was Thomas Talbot de Bashall, co. York, living 37 Henry III., ancestor of the chivalrous line of Bashall, whose present representative is Richard-Walmesley Lloyd, Esq., son and heir of the late Richard-Hughes Lloyd, Esq. of Plymog, Gwerclas, and Bashall. (See Talbot de Bashall, under Lloyd of Plymog.)
2. Hugh de Talbot, made Governor of Plessy, in Essex, by his uncle, Hugo de Gournay, then in rebellion against Henry I., from whom descends the great house of Shrewsbury. (See Burke's Peerage, art. Earl of Shrewsbury.)

Gerard de Gournay was s. by his son,

Hugo de Gournay, Lord of Gournay, "educatus cum Henrico I., et ab illo multum honoratus et dilectus," (Talbot de Bashall Latin Pedigree, ap. Whitaker's Craven, p. 25,) whose wife was "Matilda soror Roberti Comitis Normandiorum in Normaniâ," (ibid.) By her he was father of,

Hugo de Gournay, presumed to be Lord of Gournay, who retired into England, and d. in 1223, leaving a son, Hugh, whose only dau., Julia de Gournay, m. William Bardolph, feudal Baron of Wirmigay, and was mother of Hugh Bardolph, summoned to parliament as Baron Bardolph, 6 Feb. 1299. (See Burke's Extinct Peerage.)

Two younger branches of the family continued, however, to exist after this period. The one which was the most distinguished was seated at Barew-Gurney and Inglishcombe, in Somersetshire, as early as the Survey and retaining the name of Gournay through two female descents, added to their territory the estates of the Harpe-

trees and other considerable families, and became powerful feudal barons in the West of England. The most generally known of this family of the Gournays were Sir Thomas de Gournay, one of the murderers of EDWARD II., and his son, Sir Matthew de Gournay, frequently mentioned by Froissart, who d. in 1406, at the advanced age of 96, after having assisted at all the great battles of EDWARD III. and the Black Prince. This gallant veteran appears to have been the last male of the Somersetshire Gurneys.

The other younger branch of the Norman Gournays held certain manors in Norfolk, as mesne lords, under the Barons of Gournay, the capital tenants, by whom they were subenfeoffed. Of this line was

SIR WILLIAM DE GOURNAY, Knt., Lord of the manor of Runhall, in Norfolk, temp. HENRY II., and of Swathings, in Hardingham, and Hingham, whose son,

MATTHEW DE GOURNAY, obtained from Hameline Plantagenet, Earl of Warren, that nobleman's kinswoman, Rose de Burnham, or de Warren, in marriage, and with her the manor of Harpley came to the Norfolk Gurneys. The grandson of this marriage,

SIR JOHN DE GURNEY, was in arms against HENRY III. at the battles of Lewes and Evesham, but having received a pardon, attended Prince EDWARD (EDWARD I.) in 1270, to the Holy Land. This Sir John de Gurney bore for arms, "argent, a cross engrailed, gules"—a coat borne by his descendants ever since. From him sprang

EDMUND GURNEY, living in the reigns of EDWARD III. and RICHARD II., a lawyer of eminence, who held the situation of standing counsel, or recorder, as it would now be called, of the city of Norwich. He m. the heiress of the De Wauncys, of West Barsham, in Norfolk, at which place the Gurneys were subsequently seated. His son,

SIR JOHN GURNEY, was sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk in the 1st HENRY IV., and was one of the knights of the shire for the former county in the parliament held at Coventry, anno 1404. He had no children, and was therefore succeeded by his nephew, whose grandson, WILLIAM GURNEY, is frequently mentioned in the Paston Letters. Their descendant,

ANTHONY GURNEY, lived in the reign of HENRY VIII. He m. Margaret, dau. of Sir Robert Lovel, and one of the co-heirs of the Lords Mortimer of Attleborough. The family continued at Great Ellingham and West Barsham until the year 1661, when it became extinct in the elder male line, and the estates devolved to co-heiresses. From a younger son of the West Barsham and Harpley line descended

JOHN GOURNEY, or GURNEY, of Norwich, merchant, b. in 1655, who embraced the tenets of the Quakers. This gentleman d. in 1721, leaving, with two younger sons,

JOHN, whose descendants in the male line became extinct, on the death of Bartlett Gurney, Esq. of Coltishall, in Norfolk, in 1802.

JOSEPH, of whose line we are about to treat.

The second son,

JOSEPH GURNEY, Esq., was of Keswick, in the co. Norfolk. He m. Hannah Middleton, of the family of Silkworth and Belsay, in Northumberland, and was s. at his decease by his eldest son,

JOHN GURNEY, Esq. of Keswick, who m. Elizabeth Kett, of the family of the Norfolk rebel, and had issue,

I. RICHARD, his heir.

II. John, of Earlham, near Norwich, who m. Catherine, dau. of Daniel Bell, merchant in London, and left at his demise, in 1809, with seven daus., four sons, viz.,
   1. JOHN, who m. his cousin, Elizabeth, dau. of Richard Gurney, Esq., and d. in 1814, s. p.
   2. Samuel, of London, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of James Sheppard, Esq. of Upton, in Essex, and has issue.
   3. Joseph-John, of Earlham, who m. 1st, Jane, dau. of John Birbeck, Esq. of Lynn, by whom he has two children; 2ndly, Mary, dau. of Robert Fowler, Esq.; and 3rdly, Miss Kirkbride.
   4. Daniel, of North Runcton, in Norfolk, who m. the Lady Harriet-Jemima Hay, dau. of William, fifteenth Earl of Errol, by Alicia Eliot, his second wife, and by her, who d. 8 Feb. 1837, has issue.

III. Joseph, of Lakenham Grove, near Norwich, who m. Jane, dau. of Abel Chapman, Esq., and d. in 1830, leaving daus. only.

RICHARD GURNEY, Esq. of Keswick. This gentleman m. 1st, Agatha, dau. and heiress of David Barclay, Esq. of Youngsbury, in Herts, (see family of BARCLAY,) and had, by her, one son and a dau.,

JOHN, late an officer in the 42nd regiment.

William, also an officer in the army.

Elizabeth-Jane, m. to Thomas Mylne, Esq. of Mylnefield.

Margaret. Anne. Jane. Helen-Douglas.

Mr. Guthrie is convener, and one of the deputy-lieutenants for the county of Forfar.

Lineage.

The surname of Guthrie, one of great antiquity in Scotland, like the most ancient, is of local origin, being assumed by the chief, when such designations were first adopted, from his lands in Forfarshire. The earliest writs of the family not being attainable, we cannot, at present, authentically trace its representation, in a continued series, further back than the time of JAMES II. of Scotland.

In the year 1299, after the great Sir William Wallace had resigned the guardianship of Scotland and retired to France, the northern lords of that kingdom sent Squire Guthrie to desire his return, that he might assist in opposing the English. Guthrie embarked at Aberbrothock, landed at Sluis, from whence they conveyed Wallace and his retinue back to Montrose. (Life of Sir William Wallace.)

Walter de Maule, ancestor of the Lords Panmure, and Adam de Guthrie, are witnesses in a decreet of the burgesses of Dundee, anno 1348.

Crawfurd, in his Lives of the Officers of State, says that the Guthries held the barony of Guthrie by charter from King DAVID II. But that they were men of rank and property long before the reign of JAMES II. is manifest, by the fact that Master Alexander, of Guthrie, is a witness in a charter granted by Alexander Seaton, Lord of Gordon, to William, Lord Keith, afterwards Earl Marshal, dated 1 Aug. 1442; and that he obtained the lands of Kincaldrum, in the barony of Lower Lesslie, and sheriffdom Forfar, to himself and Marjory Guthrie, his spouse, by charter, from George, Lord Lesslie, of Leven, the Superior, dated 10 April, 1457. By the above-mentioned Marjory he had three sons, of whom the eldest,

SIR DAVID GUTHRIE, Baron of Guthrie, was sheriff of Forfar in the year 1457. He held the high situation of armour-bearer to King JAMES III., and was constituted Lord Treasurer of Scotland in 1461, in which post he continued until 1467, when he was appointed Comptroller of the Exchequer. In 1469, he was made Lord Register of Scotland; and in 1472, we find him one of the ambassadors, on the part of Scotland, who met those of England on the 25th April, in that year, at Newcastle, and concluded a truce till the month of July, 1473. In 1473, he was constituted Lord Chief Justice of Scotland. By these great employments he augmented, in a vast degree, his paternal fortune, and to testify his thankfulness to God, he founded and endowed a collegiate church at Guthrie for a provost and three prebends, dedicated to the Virgin, which was confirmed by a bull from Pope Sextus IV., dated at Rome, 14 June, 1479. Sir David Guthrie m. 1st, a dau. of Sir Thomas Maule, Lord of Panmure, but had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Janet, dau. of Sir Archibald Dundas, of Dundas, by whom he had (with a dau., Elizabeth, m. to Alexander Maule, ancestor of the Earls of Panmure) a son,

Sir Alexander Guthrie, of Guthrie, designed, in the lifetime of his father, "of Kincaldrum." He m. the Hon. Margaret Lyon, dau. of John, 3rd Lord Glamis, by Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Scrimgeour, of Dudhope, Constable of Dundee, and had four sons and a dau., viz.,

I. David, heir-apparent, who m. a dau. of Ferquhard Macintosh, by his wife, Giles, dau. of Hugh, Lord Lovat, and left, at his decease, (he was slain at Flodden,) an only son,
Andrew, successor to his grandfather.

II. Alexander, who got from his father the lands of Kincaldrum and Lower, by charter, dated 28 Aug. 1508. The great-grandson of this gentleman,
David Guthrie, became eventually laird of Guthrie, as will appear in the sequel.

III. George, upon whom the lands of Kincreich were conferred.

IV. John, of Hilton, ancestor of the Right Rev. John Guthrie, Bishop of Moray, who became laird of Guthrie.

I. Elizabeth, m. to John Ogilvy, of Inverquharity, and had issue.

Sir Alexander, surrounded by friends and vassals, attended his sovereign to the fatal field of Flodden, and there fell, (9 Sept. 1513,) with his eldest son, David, his three brothers-in-law, David, William, and George Lyon, and his nephew, Sir Thomas Maule, of Panmure, He was s. by his grandson,

Andrew Guthrie, of Guthrie, who m. Christian, dau. of Gairden, of Gairden, and had a son,

Alexander Guthrie, of Guthrie, one of the subscribing barons to the articles agreed upon in the general assembly of the Kirk, in July, 1567, and also one of those to the bond or association for supporting the king and his government, after Queen Mary's resignation. He was assassinated at his house of Inverpeffer, where he was residing, by his cousin, Patrick Gairden, of Gairden, in consequence of a feud that had arisen between the two families. He had m. Isabel, dau. of William Wood, of Bonnytown, and left three sons, viz.,

I. Alexander, his heir.

II. William, of Gagie, who m. his cousin, Isabella, dau. of John Leslie, younger, of Balquhan, and dying in 1622, was father of Francis Guthrie, of whom presently, as successor of Guthrie.

III. Gabriel, Provost of the collegiate church of Guthrie.

The eldest son,

Alexander Guthrie, of Guthrie, s. his father. He m. in 1568, Agnes, dau. of Sir Alexander Falconer, of Halkerton, (great-grandfather of Alexander, 1st Lord Halkerton,) by Elizabeth, his wife, dau. of Sir Archibald Douglas, of Glenbervie, and was s. by his eldest son,

Alexander Guthrie, of Guthrie, who m. Jean, dau. of Leighton, of Ulishaven, but having no issue male, he was s. at his decease, by his brother,

William Guthrie, of Memys. This laird, having no male issue, was s. by his cousin,

David Guthrie, of Guthrie, who, with his son, Alexander, disponed the barony of Guthrie to his brother,

Patrick Guthrie, who became "of Guthrie," and was s. therein, at his decease, by his son,

Mrs. Gyll d. 21 July following her marriage, aged 27, and was buried at Wyrardisbury.

Lineage.

The name of Gill, says Camden, in his Britannia, means valley, and has been variously spelt according to the fluctuations of orthography in different ages. Ellis, in his Doomsday-Book, shews that a family of this name held lands in Yorkshire antecedent to the Norman invasion. The barony and property of Gille's land, in Cumberland, prior to the Conquest, belonged to Bueth Gille, and was confiscated by William the Conqueror, who granted them to Hubert, one of his followers. Hubert assumed the name of the original proprietor, and styled himself De Vaux, which is the French for valley, and is synonymous with Gill. Robert de Vaux, son of Hubert, barbarously murdered Bueth Gille, and his posterity resided on the territory till it passed by marriage to the family of Thomas de Multon. In the reign of Henry III. it was conveyed to Ranulphus de Dacre, and the possessions remained in his family till the last heir male, Lord Dacre, of Gille's land, alienated it to the Duke of Norfolk. It is probable that the John Gille, whose inquis. post mortem was taken 44 Edw. III., at Greistock, in Cumberland, was the descendant of Bueth Gille, who held the Barony of Gille's land. He left issue, John Gille, son and heir.

The immediate ancestors of the family of Gyll, or Gille, of Herts, resided in Cambridgeshire, where we find Richard, son of John Gille, holding lands under Robert de Freville, of Shelford Parva, Cambridgeshire, temp. Edw. I., and Walter and Bateman Gille, of Foxton, near Royston, Cambridge, at the same time. (v. Rol. Hundredorum, temp. Edw. I.)

Richard Gylle, of Cambridgeshire, is cited in a deed of fine, Hilary, 1 Richard III. 1483, Westminster.

John Gyll, the son of Richard, having married a lady of Buckland, migrated thither, and bought lands, messuages, &c., as appears by deeds, and his will, 1499. Members of the same family are found in Maurice Gyll, who died vicar of Shudy Camps, Cambridge, 1448; and Isabella Gyll, of Shepreth, in the same county, whose will is proved at Ely, 1485, by which she leaves to her dau. and heir, Rosa, m. to John Marshall, Esq., all her property.

John Gyll, of Buckland, m. Johanna, probably dau. of William Horne, Esq. of the same locality, as he says he obtained the lands he held there from him, and dying 23 Jan. 1499, (his will was proved 8 Feb. following.)

HACKER OF EAST BRIDGFORD.

Heathcote-Hacker, John, Esq. of East Bridgford Old Hall, co. Nottingham, and of Leek, co. Stafford, b. in 1794, second son of Edward Heathcote, Esq., assumed in June, 1840, the additional surname and arms of Hacker, in compliance with the testamentary injunction of his paternal uncle, Lieut.-Col. Rowland-Heathcote Hacker, of East Bridgford.

Lineage.

The family of Hacker is several times mentioned by Thoroton, in his History of Nottinghamshire. Francis Hacker, Esq., son, by Margaret, his wife, of John Hacker, Esq., (who d. in 1620, and to whom there is a monument in the north aisle of Bridgford Church,) enjoyed the whole of his father's estates, which were considerable. He had four sons, Francis, Richard, John, and Rowland. Francis, the eldest, was Colonel Hacker, who served under the Parliament, and attended the unfortunate King Charles to his execution. He suffered as a traitor, in the succeeding reign, and his estates were forfeited. Rowland, the youngest son, served under the king during these troubles, and was living in Thoroton's time.

Col. Rowland Hacker, after the death of his brother, left the king's army in disgust, and died in retirement, upon a large leasehold property at East Bridgeford, which he had of the Masters, Fellows, &c., of Magdalen College, Oxford. The freehold estates, which were purchased of Lord Sheffield by John Hacker, (to whom the arms of this family were granted,) were inherited by the Rev. Edward Heathcote, who m. Catherine, eldest dau. and one of the three co-heiresses of Robert Hacker, Esq., the last male descendant of this family. Richard and John, brothers of Col. Mr. Halford m. 2ndly, Charlotte,* relict of George Denne, Esq. late of Chislett Court, in the same county, but has no issue.

Lineage.

The HALFORDS of Kent derive either from the son or brother of Sir Richard Halford, the first baronet of Wistow, but, owing to the loss of some family documents at the time of the Revolution, the precise fact cannot now be ascertained. The house of Halford, one of great antiquity, was originally seated in Warwickshire, at a place called Halford, where one branch of the family continued to reside until a century and a half ago. Dugdale, in his history of that county, mentions a Robert de Halford, of Halford, who held half a knight's fee under the Earl of Warwick, temp. HENRY III. The senior branch, the Halfords, of Wistow, maintained for several generations a leading position in the county of Leicester, until the decease of Sir Charles Halford, in 1780, when Wistow passed, under his will, to his widow, who bequeathed the estate to her nephew, DR. VAUGHAN, who was subsequently created a Baronet, and assuming in 1815 the surname of Halford, is the present SIR HENRY HALFORD.

RICHARD HALFORD, Esq., son of the Rev. Richard Halford, who held the living of Lyminge, in Kent, a scion of the Wistow family, m. Mary Creed, niece of Sir James Creed, M.P. for the city of Canterbury, about the year 1760, and left, with two daus., Mary and Sarah, a son,

Alice-Augusta. Matilda.

Lineage.

The ancient name of HALKETT, in the writs of this family, is promiscuously written "de Hawkhead" and "de Halkett;" it is said to be territorial or local, and to have been assumed by the proprietors of the lands and barony of Hawkhead, in Renfrewshire, so soon as surnames became hereditary in Scotland.

The exact period when the Halketts established themselves in Fife cannot at this distance of time be precisely ascertained, but we have proofs that they were free barons, and had large landed possessions in the western parts of that county six hundred years ago. The first of the family upon record who distinguished himself by feats of arms was

DAVID DE HALKETT, a powerful warrior, living temp. King DAVID BRUCE, and father of PHILIPPUS DE HALKETT, who flourished in the reigns of Kings ROBERT II. and ROBERT III. In the Chartulary of Dunfermline he is designated "Dominus de Balingall, filius et hæres David de Halkett, anno Domini 1393." From this Philip de Halkett we pass over seven generations, observing the remarkable fact, that the chiefs of this family have always been in the military service of their own country, or that of some allied power.

GEORGE HALKETT, the ninth in direct lineal descent, and a distinguished officer, m. Isabella, dau. of Sir Patrick Hepburn, of Waughton, and had three sons and one dau., of whom

SIR JOHN HALKETT, Knt., the third son, continued the line of the family, and received the honour of knighthood from King JAMES VI. He attached himself to a military life, and went into the service of the states of Holland, where by his bravery and merit he rose to the rank of general, and had the command of a Scots regiment. He was likewise president of the grand Court Marishall in Holland. Sir John m. Mary Van Loon, a lady of high rank in Amsterdam, and was killed at the siege of Bois-le-Duc in 1628, leaving a son and successor,

He m. Anne, heiress of John Craigie, Esq. of Dumbarnie, one of the lords of justiciary in Scotland, (by Susan, eldest dau. of Sir John Inglis, Bart. of Cramond, and Lady Susan Hamilton, his wife, dau. of the fourth Earl of Haddington,) and by the deeds of settlement her husband and their successors were obliged to assume the name and arms of CRAIGIE, in addition to those of HALKETT. By this lady he had issue,

Lineage.

This is a branch of the Halls of Greatford Hall, co. Lincoln, a family of great antiquity and high consideration, who were themselves a scion of the Fitz Williams of Clixby, of the same lineage as Earl Fitzwilliam. A younger son of that house, Arthur Fitz-William, of the Hall, was called, to distinguish him from his brothers, Arthur of the Hall, and that designation became in the sequel, Arthur Hall. Many of his descendants were, for generations after, christened Fitzwilliam Hall. The line we are now treating of was continued by

WILLIAM HALL, Esq., born in Lincolnshire, youngest child of Edmund Hall, Esq. of Greatford Hall, by Anne, his wife, dau. of John Elmers, Esq. of Swinford. He held first the appointment of British consul at Bilbao, in Spain, and subsequently, in 1687, accompanied to Jamaica, as secretary, Christopher Monk, Duke of Albemarle, governor of the island. In the 17th HENRY VIII. we find Sir Stephen Hamerton in the train of Henry de Clifford, first Earl of Cumberland, and in favour at court, but afterwards being involved in the great northern insurrection, (anno 1537,) he received his majesty's pardon. Rebelling a second time with the Lord Darcy, and his brother-in-law, Sir Francis de Bigod, he was taken prisoner, conveyed to London, and executed and attainted. The estates of this unfortunate gentleman falling under the attainder, Hellifield-Peel remained vested in the crown, until granted (37 HENRY VIII.) by the name of "the manor of Hellifield, with its appurtenances, part of the possession of Stephen Hamerton, Knt. attainted of high treason," to George Browne, and his heirs, to be held of the king in capite, for the consideration of £296 9*s.* 2*d.* The estate did not remain, however, long in this family, for in the 7th EDWARD VI. it was alienated to Sir Arthur Darcy, Knt., and by him, in the next reign, transferred to John Redman, Esq., father of the gentleman who had married the granddaughter of the attainted Sir Stephen Hamerton. In the 3rd of ELIZABETH, this John Redman passed the manor to the nephew and next male heir of the said Sir Stephen, namely,

JOHN HAMERTON, Esq., who thus became "of Hellifield-Peel." This gentleman m. Ursula, dau. of Robert Banister, Esq. of Kilbrook, and had issue,
